U. S. TRADE BODY PROBES PRICE FIXING

Investigation Will Reveal Cost of Conducting Big Businesses

INTERESTS WILL CLASH

Congress Will Get Information to Be Used in Passing Legislation

(Copyright, 1927, by Post Pub. Co.)

Washington.—In undertaking a board investigation of resale price maintenance which it announced Thursday, the Federal Trade commission has thrust its hand into a hornets' nest of merchandising controversy.

Who will be stung by the results remains to be seen, but the consumers of the nation and the merchants should receive much interesting information from this inquiry regarding the elements in the costs of living and the cost of conducting business.

The investigation will bring into the open immediately, a clash of interests between the chain stores and the department stores on the one hand and the multitude of independent dealers on the other, with side excursions of inquiry into the allocation of national advertising, the effects of price maintenance or lack of it upon manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers and other factors of outstanding importance in the economic structure.

COMPLAINTS RECEIVED

1. launching its inquiry which is for the expressed purpose of laying the facts before congress to assist the law-makers in considering future legislation on the subject; the commission has acted on its own initiative under its general powers. But the commission recently has had before it a number of complaints charging unfair methods in maintaining resale prices.

The courts have held that a manufacturer or dealer may refuse to sell his goods to any specific person or firm as he chooses. Under this ruling, powerful concerns, having merchandise which is in strong demand from consumers, have succeeded in maintaining a fixed re-sale price for their goods by declining further supplies to those who have cut the price. Various forms of the agency system in distribution, whereby fixed resale prices have been preserved, also have been held legal. But agreements are illegal and the majority of merchandise sells in an open market.

Various bills have been introduced in congress to permit producers of branded goods to enter into contracts with merchants which will stipulate the price at which the wares shall be sold at retail. The so-called Kelly bill was the subject of a heated hearing before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce committee in the last congress, but the report was submitted on it. The Federal Trade commission at one time recommended price maintenance under certain conditions.

GAVE LOWER METHOD

Merchants' associations of many communities are on record in favor of price maintenance legislation. The independent dealers charge they are being injured in competition with chain stores and other large organizations which sometimes offer trademarked merchandise, which nationally advertised retail price is well known to the public, at cut-prices as a "leader." Many manufacturers also support the price maintenance on the ground that sales of their products are reduced by cut-prices because of consequent consumer distrust of the price usually asked. The American Fair-Trade league has as one of its chief aims legislation to legalize contracts to resell prices.

On the other hand, the chain stores and other large outlets oppose such legislation. The leading organization in opposition is the National Retail Dry Goods association, representing several thousand department stores and specialty shops. The opposition contends that to permit resale price-fixing would relegate the retail merchant to a position of mere agent and reduce his ability to serve his community. Farm and labor organizations are on record against price maintenance.

DOES CONSUMER SAVE

Whether the consumer does or does not save money by cut-price sales in the long run is one of the centers of controversy in this subject upon which the commission probably will be given considerable data. The chain store economic and financial research bureau recently announced that as a result of a study of figures for some 40,000 units, it was found that in 1926 such stores sold $8 per cent of their merchandise at a loss and 26 per cent.

The commission's study will include costs, profits and margins on competing price-maintained and non-price-maintained merchandise including the relation of advertising expense and, all in all, has undertaken an inquiry which promises to develop the utmost interest for general consumers as well as for business and industry.

CORONER CALLED TO INVESTIGATE DEATH; FINDS HIS OWN SON

Wausau—(AP)—Called to the scene of an accident Thursday night near Lac du Flambeau to investigate the death of a young man, the coroner of Vilas co., P. J. Gaffney, Eagle River, received a great shock when he discovered the boy was his own son, a lad of 19. Four or five young girls from Minocqua were severely injured in the wreck and taken to a hospital in Merrill. It is believed that one or two of the girls were fatally injured.

Gaffney, driving a large touring car, was accompanied by seven other persons and nearing the excavation of a bridge off State Highway 70, a short distance from Lac du Flambeau, the car ran into a pile of sand and a ditch.

TWO DEAD IN FARM HOME EXPLOSION

SEEK MAN BELIEVED TO HAVE SET OFF CHARGE WHICH WRECKED RESIDENCE

Iron River, Mich.—(AP)—Police in Iron and Dickinson cos. are hunting for Joseph Omelian, 40, believed responsible for the blast of dynamite Thursday night which killed two persons and seriously injured three at the home of Gust Demboski, Sr., two miles northwest of Sunset lake pavilion.

The dead are: Gust Demboski, Sr., 36 and Julius Demboski, 12, his son. The injured are: Mrs. Gust Demboski, 36, Joseph Demboski, 2, and Emil Petovich, 45.

Mrs. Demboski told officials that she suspected the explosion was the work of Omelian, who she stated had threatened to kill her husband last January. Omelian was arrested on a charge of arson and admitted that he had set fire to Demboski's barn, but was released when charges were withdrawn. He has a prison record.

"At the hospital," a few hours after the blast, it was reported that the three injured were seriously hurt although they are expected to recover. The blast wrecked the Demboski home.

SLAIN MAN'S WIDOW ASKS SACCO-VANZETTI PARDON

Boston—(AP)—Governor Alvan T. Fuller Friday heard final arguments in behalf of clemency for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, under sentence of death for murder. While he was closeted with William G. Thompson, chief counsel for the two men and Herbert E. Ehrman, associate counsel, a telegram from Mrs. Sarah Berardelli, widow of Alessandro Berardelli, asking that the two men convicted of slaying her husband and another may be set free arrived at his office.

HELEN WILLS WINS IN TENNIS TOURNEY FINALS

Manchester, Mass.—(AP)—Miss Helen Wills of Berkeley, Calif., Friday defeated Miss Helen Jacobs of the same city 6-1, 6-2 in the finals of the Essex County club tournament here.

Once more Miss Wills demonstrated her complete command of American woman's tennis by defeating her 18-year-old fellow Californian. Miss Wills was master from the very start. Throughout she had Miss Jacobs on the run with deep drives which shaved alternate side lines.

The younger Berkeley girl's service which is generally her most formidable weapon and which had counted largely in her victory of Mrs. Nolla Mallory, national champion, on Wednesday, gave the Wimbledon champion no trouble whatever.

BOTH HOUSES PASS BILL FOR U. OF W. GYM

Senate and Assembly Approve Measure Appropriating $300,000 for Field House

Madison—(AP)—A dream of many years may become a reality through passage by both houses Thursday of the $300,000 appropriation bill to build a field house at the University of Wisconsin to provide a large gymnasium, and adequate facilities for physical education and many indoor recreational activities.

The state senate passed the bill 19 to 4 and it was quickly messaged to the assembly and that body concurred.

The $300,000 is appropriated in two $150,000 annual allotments and an additional $300,000 would be raised by bonds.

The bill now goes to Governor Zimmerman for his signature or rejection.

WANT SPEED!

Irkred because of what they call delay on the part of the senate, approximately 60 assemblymen voted for the blast of dynamite Friday adopted, with applause and threats of "stronger action," a motion to appoint a committee to confer with the upper house on speeding the business to the assembly so that adjournment may be taken Friday.

Hoping to adjourn or at least dispose of the major bills by Saturday night both houses worked at top speed Thursday.

The senate killed a joint resolution providing for appointment of an interim committee to study educational institutions in Wisconsin and thereby killed the plan approved by the assembly earlier in the day.

Memorials met a quick death in the assembly, that house killing the Duncan joint memorializing congress to revise, and amend, the tariff laws downward Senator Schuman's resolution endorsing the McNary-Haugen bill and praising former Governor Frank O. Lowden met its death in the lower house.

ASSEMBLY CONCURS

The assembly concurred in the $11,000,000 university finance bill and the appropriation bill covering maintenance of penal and charitable institutions under the state board of control. Several amendments were added to the university bill in its journey through the legislature.

Amendments gave the board of regents the power of university control of the $500,000 appropriation for addition to the state historical library utilizing on the university campus, the funds formerly being under the state historical society; raised from $27,000 to $30,000 the appropriation for farm and research institutes held by the university's agricultural college and added $3,000 for the civil service department.

The assembly concurred in the Senate's amendments cutting down the number of county normal schools and in joint resolutions for joint interim committees on memorial for the late Governor Philip and LaFollette.

The Wisconsin Mining school appropriation bill, in new form, without the rail road men are here for the interstate commerce commission hearing on railroad cab curtains and other betterments of working conditions for railroad men.

Senator John J. Blaine, Solomon Levitan, state treasurer, Attorney General John W. Reynolds, State Senator Harry Stouthoff, Assembyman Alvin C. Reis, J. A. McDonald, railroad commissioner, and J. L. Rogers, of the interstate commission were the representatives of the state in the ceremony.

RENAME MONT BLANC TO HONOR BENITO MUSSOLINI

Rome—(AP)—Mont Blanc, highest peak of the Alps, is to be named Mont Benito Mussolini in honor of the Fascist premier.

This was announced Friday with plans for inauguration on the mountain of the first of a series of Alpine camps for training thousands of youthful black shirts of the Fascist state.

The "ambulance chasing" bills make fee-splitting grounds for disbarment and provide punishment for unethical and unprofessional conduct on the part of members of the state bar. The bills resulted from an inquiry into irregularities of the profession in Milwaukee conducted by the circuit court.

Limitedation of fireworks came as a result of numerous accidents and deaths over the Fourth of July, caused by explosives.

Another bill which received the governor's approval was one by the committee on judiciary for a severance tax. It is designed to lower taxes on forest land so as to save as much of the land as possible and to lighten the burden on those who own the land. It was regarded as a follow on the forest referendum.

ARMED GANG ATTACKS DUBLIN MILITARY CAMP

Dublin—(AP)—Armed men made an attack on the guard at the Tallaght military camp near Dublin Friday morning, but were driven off by the soldiers fire. None of the guard was injured.

Between 50 and 60 shots were exchanged. The morning was dark and the military authorities were unable to say whether any of the attackers who retreated across a field were wounded.

Flower Cars Will Make Weekly Trips Tomorrow

Tomorrow will be another big day for patients at St. Elizabeth hospital and Riverview sanatorium for it is the day the Post-Crescent Flower Cars pick up gifts of flowers from generous Appleton people and deliver them to the bed-ridden who have little to cheer them during their distress.

The Flower Car movement has been gaining in popularity each week and a large number of Appleton people have cooperated in the work, it requires a large number of givers to provide a sufficient number of flowers and it is hoped the Flower Cars will make from 60 to 75 stops tomorrow morning.

If you have flowers you can give the sick in the hospital or the sanatorium just telephone 543 and leave your name and address. The Flower Car will stop at your home sometime after 8:15 tomorrow morning. Calls can be accepted until 8:10 Saturday morning.

It will be a convenience to the nurses and attendants at the hospital and the sanatorium if the flowers are tied in bunches and there will be less danger of damage in transit if they are wrapped lightly in paper.

VERHAGEN ADMITS BURGLARY AND IS SENT TO PRISON

Kimberly Young Man Ordered to Spend Three Years in Reformatory

Adrian "Ed" Verhagen of Kimberly Friday morning pleaded guilty in the upper branch of the municipal court to a charge of breaking and entering the home of John Hammel at Kimberly early Tuesday. He was sentenced by Acting Municipal Judge Fred V. Hohmann to a term of not less than three nor more than four years in the Green Bay reformatory.

Deputy Sheriff Otto Wicker will take Verhagen to the reformatory Saturday morning.

Verhagen has been connected with several attacks upon unescorted women in and near Appleton. One Appleton woman who was attacked near Pierce Park a week ago partly identified Verhagen as the man who accosted her.

Verhagen, who is believed to have previously served a term in the Green Bay reformatory, is the thought by Sheriff Otto Zuchlak to be the robber who entered Jacob's saloon in Kimberly recently and escaped with about $200 worth of provisions. He is also believed to be the man who entered the L. O. Maute home in Kimberly recently and got only a few cents as loot.

According to Sheriff Zuchlak, Verhagen denies that he is connected with other robbery cases in the county. The Verhagen sentence was the result of clever work and cooperation of city and county officers. Verhagen after entering the Hammel home, soiled his trousers with fresh paint from the house and at the time he was captured was wearing the suit on which there were paint stains. Also, in entering the house through the window, he left finger prints on the window sill. Assistant District Attorney Stahl and James Moore, city fingerprint expert, removed part of the window sill and took photographs of the prints. These, when compared with Verhagen's fingerprints, tallied exactly. The 26-year-old burglar saw the futility of denying his guilt and entered the plea of guilty before the court.

GOVERNMENT WANTS TO SELL 27-YEAR OLD TUG

After 27 years of service the tug Fox which has been used for government work on the Fox River will be sold to the highest bidder on Aug. 1 according to A. F. Everett, United States engineer in charge of river navigation. The all steel tug Menasha will replace the Fox. The Menasha was built about a year ago and was used in work on the river for a short time before taking it to Sturgeon Bay for remodeling. It will be brought to the river for service after Aug. 1.

The Fox still is serviceable, Mr. Everett said, but it is the policy of the department to replace wooden boats with steel. Although somewhat obsolete in type and badly worn in places, the Fox might be used for towing on the river, and "special" services. It has been used for towing by the government to some extent.

The sealed proposals will be opened Aug. 1 and the highest bidder will get the tug.

APPLETON F. R. A. HAS PART IN JUBILEE PARTY

A class initiation will be conducted by the Appleton council of the Fraternal Reserve association at the celebration to be held in Oshkosh on Sunday, Aug. 7, in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the association.

All officers and many members from the local group have organized a delegation for the event with "On to Oshkosh" as the slogan. Originally the celebration was to be arranged by the Oshkosh council for Oshkosh members. The Appleton group was the first in the Fox River valley to plan to join in the event. Members of the association from all parts of the valley and from many districts in the state will be present.

MILWAUKEE DIVINE IN METHODIST PULPIT HERE

Dr. Harland C. Logan, district superintendent of the Milwaukee district of the Methodist church will occupy the pulpit at First Methodist Episcopal church Sunday. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Holmes who are on their vacation will return to Appleton in August.

WISCONSIN WEATHER

Fair tonight and Saturday; slightly cooler in extreme southeast portion to night.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

A trough of low pressure extends from Maine to Texas this morning and from there northward over the intermountain region. This is attended by normal temperatures and numerous local showers. High pressure prevails in the northern and central plains states, with mostly fair weather and temperature somewhat below the seasonal normal. This "high" is moving towards this section and is expected to cause generally fair weather here over the weekend. The temperature is expected to drop somewhat lower to night and remain moderate until Sunday.

BRITAIN EXPERIMENTS WITH NEW DEVICES

Giant Planes May Protect India from Uprisings of Natives

BY MILTON BRONNER
London—Long distance flying makes its appeal primarily to the sporting, scientific and commercial instincts of civilian Britain, just as to civilian America.

But from the successful traversing of great distances by airplanes, grim men in the British war office are getting a different sort of satisfaction. The War Office thinks of distance flying in terms of bombing expeditions.

To be specific, it thinks of sending air forces to Irak and to India, where rebellions and revolutions are a constant problem.

Never before have British commitments in Asia weighed so heavily on the consciousness of a British government. The mandate for Irak presents a sufficiently ticklish job. But India is worse.

Outwardly calm at present, India is seething with unrest underneath. Secret agents of the Soviets constantly are crossing the border and stirring up trouble.

MANY NATIVE TROOPS
India is guarded largely by native troops, with a leavening of about 61,000 British troops. There also is a British aviation force.

Experiences in Irak have shown that nothing is so effective in curbing rebellions as a military aviation bombing squadron. And that is where the recent Carr-Mackworth attempt to fly to India without a stop came in.

The problem was whether a regular Royal Air Force bomber could take off from England, heavily laden with gasoline, and go to India or near it in a single hop.

If one plane can do it, many can. Then in time of trouble the War Office will know it is possible, in about two days, to have on the ground in India a size force of bombers which had flown from England two days previously.

In India they could be quickly reconditioned and refueled, loaded with bombs and sent to the scene of the trouble.

WARRIORS CONFIDENT
Two attempts by Lieut. Carr of reach India without a stop have failed, but the War Office, having seen American flyers cover distances almost as great, is confident the trick yet will be turned.

Carr went 3405 miles on his first attempt. He was forced to descend into the waters of the Persian Gulf. His rescue was almost miraculous.

On the second attempt, his plane went only a few miles before it was forced down by engine trouble.

Carr used a Hawker-Hornsey Royal Air Force bomber—biplane with a wing span of 57 feet, weighing when fully fueled 14,300 pounds. A single motor of 700 horsepower drove the plane at 100 to 130 miles per hour.

When a new attempt to reach India will be made has not been announced. The route is across the North Sea and Europe via Vienna, Belgrade and Constantinople; thence across Asia Minor to Bagdad and on to India.

BOOK TELLS WHY BATH TUBS FILL UP SLOWLY

Madison—(P)—A University's research department finds out many things. Now the University of Wisconsin can tell you why your bathtub fills up slowly, if it does.

A bulletin soon to come from the university press is intended to aid hydraulic engineers in designing water piping systems which require a minimum of pumping power. The bulletin tells of experiment in loss of "head" in water passing through given sizes of pipe, bent and jointed at certain angles.

Prof. C. I. Corp and H. T. Hartwell of the hydraulic engineering department of the university are co-authors of the booklet. The tests were conducted over a period of seven years. The pipe sizes vary from 1 to 6 inches in diameter and the water speeds from 2 to 20 feet per second.

MARINETTE MAY GET 2-RUNWAYS AIRPORT

Maitland and MacNider to Attend Annual State Legion Convention

Marinette—(P)—The ninth annual state convention of the American Legion may be the means of providing Marinette with an airport. The coming of Lt. Lester J. Maitland, the conqueror of the Pacific and of Assistant Secretary of War Hanford MacNider for the convention, both by plane, compels preparation of a satisfactory landing field.

The committee in charge of the meeting has taken steps which assure the flyers of a satisfactory field. The committee investigated different possibilities and finally decided upon a field about two miles from the city limits on Bay Shore Drive.

The field is of such size and character that two runways are possible. One from north to south will be 200 feet wide and 2700 feet long while other from East to West will be 150 feet wide and 2100 feet long. Experienced flyers, who have viewed the field, declare that it can be made a very satisfactory airport.

It is hoped that the coming of Lt. Maitland and of Assistant Secretary of War Hanford MacNider will stimulate local interest in flying and steps will be taken to provide a permanent airport for Marinette. The cost of purchasing the land and placing it in condition, after the convention, is said to be normal.

NASH

Leads the World in Motor Car Values

"Come drive" week
July 27th to Aug. 3rd

An invitation to drive the easiest riding cars you ever traveled in

The Three New Series of Nash motor cars, introduced thirty days ago, have won America.

It is their beauty, speed, lowered lines, attractive colors and, above all, their phenomenal new performance which have given so much added impetus to Nash sales. (July 58% greater than any July in Nash history, and production now reaching the unprecedented total of 700 to 800 cars daily.)

Praise for these finer, faster models of Nash is heard everywhere.

Those who have driven them will tell you that supreme riding luxury is accomplished by the new Nash super-springs of secret-process alloy-steel.

They will tell you the engines in these new cars are smoother and quieter than ever.

And they will also tell you that these are the easiest steering cars on earth!

It is the greatest motor car contrast in the world today to step out of your car, and then drive one of these great new models of Nash.

We want you to know that contrast. This is Nash "Come Drive" Week. Courtesy cars are waiting at our showroom for you to try.

All you need to do is step into the car, sit down behind its wheel, and drive it. No sales pressure. No obligation. Don't buy any car today, until you have driven a Nash!

NEWS OF NEENAH AND MENASHA

SOCIETY

BOARD CHANGES ITS MIND AND DECIDES TO PAVE STREETS

Abandon Paving Projects at First Meeting and Then Re-considers

Neenah—Several streets will be paved this fall. It was decided at a meeting of the board of public works Thursday night following an earlier session when the members decided to abandon all paving plans until next year. Camel-stk paving was abandoned until proper sewerage connections can be made.

Walnut-st from E. Wisconsin-ave to Doty-ave will be widened in connection with the paving and widening of Doty-ave from Walnut to Church-st. When this work is finished the left turn at Wisconsin-ave and Commercial-st will be eliminated and traffic directed over Doty-ave and Walnut-st. Doty-ave will be 32 feet wide.

The Walnut-st paving will take the place of the Canal-st paving in the contract awarded several weeks ago to the Joseph Schneider Co. of Menasha. The width of Walnut st. was not decided as part of this property is owned by the city and the remainder by the Valley Inn corporation. Other pavements to be started this fall are Church-st from W. Wisconsin-ave to the canal; Lincoln-st from First to Second-sts; the alley north of E. Wisconsin-ave from N. Commercial-st to Burstein's factory. Improvements on Sherry-st. will be made.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Gerhardt have been entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Martin Doeher and children of Davenport, Ia., and Mrs. Anna Doeher of Escanaba, Mich., during the last few days at their home on Smithst.

GYPSY DRUNK SENT TO WORKHOUSE FOR 60 DAYS

Neenah—Henry Thomas was sentenced Friday morning by Judge Jensen to 60 days in the Winnebago-to-workhouse for operating an automobile while intoxicated, and his wife, Rose Thomas, was sentenced to the county jail for 10 days on a charge of vagrancy. Both are members of a band of gypsies which was ordered out of the city Thursday by police officer and afterwards returned and pitched a tent near the carnival grounds. An effort is being made by police to locate gypsies who recently defrauded a Duluth, Minn., resident of $2,000 by the "magic bowl" route.

FORMER NEENAH WOMAN WINS DIVORCE DEGREE

Neenah—County Judge McDonald on Thursday granted a divorce to Carolyn Luttmann from Charles Luttmann. The charge a non-support and cruel and inhuman treatment. They were married Jan. 2, 1922. Mrs. Luttmann obtained the custody of the child and alimony of $25 a month. The Luttmans formerly were Neenah residents but now live in Fond du Lac.

DRUNK PAYS FINE

Neenah—Sam Weston of Fond du Lac paid a fine of $5 and costs Friday morning for being drunk and disorderly. He was arrested Thursday night while creating a disturbance on the streets.

GAMES POSTPONED

Neenah—Young Men's softball league games scheduled for Thursday evening were not played on account of rain which started at 5 o'clock. Two of the teams appeared for play but postponed their match until a later date.

SOFTBALL TEAM HEADS GET READY FOR PENNANT

Menasha—A meeting of managers of businessmen's softball league teams was held Thursday evening at the Red Cross office at which arrangements for a banquet to close the season were made. The banquet will be given for all teams in the league, the costs to be paid by the losing teams. The place for holding the event and the date will be decided later.

Every other week beginning Aug. 7, two games will be played in order that the schedule can be completed by Sept. 1. The managers accepted a new ruling whereby a player on a team which disbands or fails to complete the schedule, cannot play on any other team without permission from the advisory board as it is the purpose of this board to keep all teams the same throughout the season.

The Young Men's league games which were not played Thursday evening on account of rain, will be played on Friday night.

SEINER INJURES KNEE WHEN HE FALLS IN WATER

Neenah—H. Fisher, First-st, is at Theda Clark hospital with broken kneecap received Thursday evening while swimming for minnows in the Fox river near the Bergstrom Paper company mill. Mr. Fisher was wading in the water and lost his balance falling on submerged sewer pipe.

ESTIMATE 100,000 DIED IN EARTHQUAKE

Catastrophe in May Was One of Worst Disasters in World History

London—(AP)—Scores of death and terror are described in the first detailed account to come out of the "wild west" of China following the great earthquake which occurred in Kansu province May 22. The details, telling of the complete destruction of the cities of Sislong, Liangchow, Tumentse and Kultang and innumerable towns and villages with a casualty list estimated at 100,000, may be classed among the most terrible catastrophes of all time.

Monsignor Buddenbrock, vicar apostolic of the Steyl mission at Lanxhou, Kansu, gave the details in a letter, an outline of which has been sent to the Westminster Gazette by its Shanghai correspondent. It says that in Liangchow alone, at least 10,000 were killed, while a moving mountain completely wrecked the city of Tumentse.

Scores of worshippers at mass in the church at Sislong were overwhelmed by the sudden collapse of the edifice as subterranean rumblings were heard. Priests worked for hours administering the sacrament to the dying and carrying the injured to places of safety. Not a house in Sislong escaped damage, and in each dwelling there were dead and dying. Throughout the earthquake area the people suffered untold miseries.

Monsignor Buddenbrock says that at some places great fissures appeared in the earth from which a bluish black liquid spurted.

FLASHES OF LIFE

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Northampton, Mass.—Sensation in President Coolidge's home town. Two girls went shopping in one piece bathing suits. Somebody notified the mayor and chief of police. Then the shoppers fled before a curious throng.

Hartford, Conn.—Miss Mary Hamer Goodrich will keep an engagement to play bridge even if she has to fly. She came 35 miles in an airplane because she feared she would be late, piloting the craft most of the way herself.

Miss Emma Liebhaber is visiting relatives at Detroit and Pontiac, Mich. John Calder and daughter Blanche have returned from a visit with relatives at Detroit and Pontiac, Mich.

New York—A new organization is named "The Irish Jews of America." Its sponsors say there are several thousand eligibles in the country, including 1,000 in greater New York.

HOT WEATHER HINTSMENASHA AUTOIST HURT WHEN TWO CARS COLLIDE

Menasha—Leonard Brodzinski, 840 Third-st, was quite seriously injured late Thursday afternoon in an automobile collision on the Lake Shore road about four miles south of Menasha. He was struck head on by an unidentified driver and his car was thrown among trees and boulders on the shore line of Lake Winnebago and was badly damaged. He suffered painful injuries to his legs, arms and forehead. He was conveyed to his home.

The dictatorship idea has taken a firm hold in some European countries, notably in Italy, but lately it has spread right over into the western hemisphere. Chile has a military dictatorship so firm as to rival Mussolini's. President Borne is altering the Haitian constitution so as to become that republic's man on horseback, and the A. F. of L. has exposed the persecution of labor union officials under Machado in Cuba, where the constitution suffered untold miseries.

Drift Toward Dictator Is Noted In Washington

Washington . . . Nearly every other day now, someone warns us that we are drifting toward a government by dictatorship.

This warning has almost superseded the old threat that the existing form of government in the United States was in danger of being overthrown in favor of a Soviet regime.

These differences are promptly seen by comparison of the two bogeys.

The viewers-with-alarm who feared revolution at the direct primary system by reactionary statesmen and politicians. The direct primary is supposed to be one of the big bulwarks of popular government in this country.

PRESIDENT NEAR DICTATOR

Some folks are so convinced that the present bureaucracy is working for a dictatorship that they have formed an organization called the American Constitutional Association to fight the trend. The incorporators declare that the current ridicule to which Congress is constantly subjected and the gradual " usurpation of the rights of the states" are both a part of the insidious attempt upon the right of free government.

School children have always been told that the president of this country holds more power than most European monarchs, which is true. Woodrow Wilson attained the high water mark of presidential power to date, during the war.

The president's greatest instrument of power is still the prerogative of veto, but it has been re-enforced in recent years by other important powers.

The right of the president to remove all appointed officers at will, which has been confirmed within the year, is another of his dictatorial powers.

The more Congress is discredited, the stronger becomes the position of

SERVICE CLUBS FORM SOFTBALL LEAGUE

Menasha—The Service clubs of Menasha and Neenah have organized a softball ball league under the direction of Coach George Christoff of Neenah. The opening games will be played next Thursday night at which time Menasha Rotary club will clash with Neenah Kiwanis club at Doty park. Menasha and Menasha Kiwanis club will line up against the Neenah Kiwanis club at Menasha city park.

MENASHA MEN GO NORTH HUNTING BLACKBERRIES

Menasha—Edward Wroblewski and Charles Garow expect to go to Oconto Falls Saturday to spend two days picking raspberries. A week ago they went after blueberries further north and not only found them plentiful but also found the berry patches filled with pickers from Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Blackberries still were green. The bushes are loaded and there is every indication that the crop will be record breaker.

The executive, The House, hamstrung by its rules, is discredited and ruled by an oligarchy. The Senate, where exists the unlimited debate which some liberals describe as the last bulwark of democracy, is threatened with drastic closure.

The perfect type of "man on horseback" in this country today is Vice-President Dawes, who wants to abolish the direct primaries and amend the Senate rules. But Dawes is so individualistic and so unwilling to play the game that Coolidge dislikes him and the Senate dislikes him. The gossip is that he will be absent from the Republican national ticket in '28.

Frank O. Lowden and Governor Ritchie of Washington are the latest public figures to warn that popular government is on the defensive as the dictatorship movement gains strength. Senator Norris used the argument in his anti-third term blast and other progressives have echoed the thought.

A Distinctive Showing of Beautiful Fur Coats of Quality

Seldom Seen In Such Remarkable Variety of Styles and Pelts—The Savings Are Decidedly Worthy

The women who will attend this display and selling event of fine fur coats are the ones who are the smartest dressed—and usually the most economical—for they look ahead to the cold days to come, and plan their wardrobe when they will save money and gain in chic.

The savings in this event amount to much. We planned this selling so carefully that we were able to buy garments before the rush of the market season—and our good fortune is reflected in the low prices. Prices are much lower now than they will be later in the season!

If you are a connoisseur in furs, you'll find much to admire in this wonderful presentation. If you're not, you'll be more than delighted with the gorgeous color, lightness and softness of these exquisite furs—All of them are perfectly made and matched—Styles for every taste and purse—featuring entirely new collar lines—body lines and trimming effects. The very finest of linings add much to the desirability of these coats.

BOTTOMLEY, GREAT BRITISH WRITER, ENDS JAIL TERM

Five Years in Prison Fails to Lessen Ardor of "John Bull"

BY MILTON BRONNER
London — America's best enemy in England, Horatio Bottomley, the man who as editor of a British weekly called John Bull, took delight in pulling feathers out of the American eagle's tail, is to be let out of prison next month after having served five years of a seven year's sentence for misuse of funds subscribed to his patriotic and jingo organizations.

All England and the United States as well may wonder what Bottomley will do when he gets out.

SWANK FROM THE YANK

In his painiest days, Bottomley's magazine delighted in printing vitriolic articles about America under such headlines as "More Swank from the Yank."

Before Bottomley went to prison, he placarded three-story billboards with this legend just about the time that swarms of American tourists were due in London for the annual dollar spending season. British jingoes — "100 per cent Britshers" — cheered him on, and the circulation of his John Bull Magazine rose to near the million mark.

In all the 151 years of the American republic we have never had a man exactly like this 74-year-old prisoner. His rise to fame and power was meteoric.

He became known to the general public as a speaker who could always carry the approval of the crowds. He was elected to Parliament as Liberal from one of the London districts, but spoke and voted as an independent. He wrote articles for a Sunday weekly owned by a newspaper king and every week the billboards blazed with:

"Next Sunday another brilliant article by Horatio Bottomley will appear exclusively in the Daily Blank."

HE'S SUPER-PATRIOT

His activities involved Mr. in frequent lawsuits and he never employed a lawyer. Known as a brilliant "fix lawyer," he always defended himself and nearly always won.

During the war he was a super-patriot who delivered speeches urging the young men to enlist. He exerted himself to bring all kinds of little comforts to the common soldiers. He was admired by the crowd and feared by the great, for it was said he knew every skeleton that rattled in the closets of the privileged class.

Then one day Nemesis came to him through a plain little man who hawked in the streets of London a poorly printed pamphlet attacking some of Bottomley's financial activities. Bottomley sought to have the man enjoined from continuing the sale of the brochure. While this was still impending, the government pounced down on him, charging him with defrauding poor people in some club he founded for the purchase of Victory bonds.

The famous editor, the powerful orator, the feared M. P. found himself in the dock charged with a common crime.

As usual, he acted as his own lawyer.

As usual, he conducted a brilliant cross examination of the witnesses against him.

As usual he made a powerful closing speech to the jury, but this time there was a different ending.

The Judge delivered a cold devastating charge against him. The jury found him guilty. And the once rubicon Bottomley now ashen-faced heard himself sentenced to seven years imprisonment.

LOSES FINE CLOTHES

He was to be taken away from his luxurious editorial office. He was to be taken away from his magnificent home in Sussex. He was to be taken away from his beloved racing stable. He was to be cut off from his dainty food and the daily champagne he loved so well.

His fine clothes were stripped off him and he was put in prison clothes. It was enough to break a younger man and for a time it nearly broke Bottomley. But his health rallied and now he is lean and strong and full of determination to rebuild his broken career. In his fertile brain he has already planned three books, a volume of poems, a book attacking the present prison system of England, and a third in which he will

SCHOOL BUILDINGS REPAIRED; SUMMER VACATION NEAR END

Remodeling at Washington School to Be Completed in August

Repairs on the school buildings are progressing rapidly, one of the schools is completed and several are nearly done, according to William Eggert, a member of the maintenance committee of the board of education. Appleton high school has had all painting, plastering and other minor repairs done.

Work at the Roosevelt school has been finished except the new storehouse which is now being constructed at the back of the building. A storeroom is being constructed at the Wilson junior high school similar to the one at Roosevelt. A few rooms were redecorated at the Roosevelt school.

DIVIDE AUDITORIUM
Remodeling at the Washington school probably will be completed by the middle of August, Mr. Eggert said. The old auditorium at the school which was made into two temporary classrooms several years ago, has been redivided to make four permanent classrooms. One of the grades was located at the Wilson junior high school last year as there was not enough room in the grammar school building.

Painting at the Jefferson school has been started and will be done about the middle of August, it was said. All of the classrooms in the building are to be redecorated.

Weather stripping at the First ward school will be started soon.

REPAIR BRICK WALLS
Repairing of the brick walls on the McKinley school has been practically completed. Minor repairs on the inside of the building have been done, and the athletic field has been leveled. Draining is now being done. Draining of the Richmond school grounds has been finished.

Installing of a new heating system at the Lincoln school has been started and the boilers have been placed. Other repairs will be completed soon. Redecorating of the offices of the superintendent will be started next week.

Floors on the second story of the Columbus school are being sanded and other minor repairs done.

Australia has a shortage of duck feathers used in down for quilts.

RED ARROW CLUB MEN INVITED TO MEETING

Members of the Red Arrow club of Appleton and all members of the 12th Infantry, 119th Machine Gun Battalion and other units of the 32nd Division in the city and vicinity, have been invited to the annual reunion of the division on Sept. 3 and 4 in Eau Claire.

All intending to be present are requested to write to the 127th Infantry association at Eau Claire to enable the committee to get an idea of the provisions necessary to make the reunion a success. Major R. F. Sortorme of Eau Claire is president of the association. Lieut. Col. T. Byron Beveridge, Madison, formerly of Appleton, is a member of the advisory committee.

At any rate, a piquant situation will present itself soon. Bottomley has vengeance to take, scores to even up. He thinks certain people in the press and in parliament deserted him in his hour of need. And he still wields a nimble pen and has a large following.

WET FANATICISM

It is a favorite pastime to refer to a prohibitionist as a fanatic, but not all the fanaticism is on this side of the fence. The liquor interests, or so-called wet forces, are guilty of equal prejudice and of equal extremes. If nothing short of the complete abolition of alcoholic beverages will satisfy the militant prohibitionist, so too it is a fact that nothing short of license that places them above the law will satisfy the liquor interests. It was so before prohibition and it is so now. There was hardly brewer or saloonkeeper in the land that would obey the law, and there is none that care to obey the law now, no matter what the law might be. The liquor business always has and always will assume to be a law unto itself.

Witness the epithets that were hurled at Governor Zimmerman for his veto of the Duncan beer bill. Immediately he performs what is his solemn duty under the law and the constitution, he is denounced as a traitor to the wets and as the tool of the Anti-Saloon league. One legislator arises to say that Mr. Zimmerman fooled most of the people in the election by his professed liberalism, but did not fool him. He knew him to be a "dry" all the time.

This is the thanks the state's executive gets for keeping inviolate his oath of office and for saving the state of Wisconsin from the disgrace and odium of enacting a law that affirmatively defied the constitution and laws of the United States. One can have respect for those who believe the Eighteenth amendment is a social mistake, that the people of this country ought to be permitted to decide personally for themselves whether they will or will not use alcoholic beverages and that it would be better to go back to licenses and regulation, but one can have no respect for that wet element which cares nothing for the constitution or law or the oaths of executives and public officials, and which is willing to trample under foot and ready to persecute everything and everybody that stands in its way. This is typical of the element that before prohibition persisted in selling liquor to minors, in keeping saloons open all night, holidays and elections in violation of law, sought to control state and local government by political corruption, and exhibited contempt for law and decency all along the line.

THE GOVERNORS' CONFERENCE

A number of governors of the Central west are gathered in Mackinac Island blowing off midsummer prairie steam in the cool recesses of this popular northern resort. It is an annual assemblage of an experimental political institution organized a few years ago as "the house of governors." Its purpose is to take a more practical and active interest in national affairs. The members were to reflect the sentiments of the people in the states over whose destinies they presided, and to impress congress with their political wisdom and influence. It has not been much of a success. The more serious and hopeful phases of the movement soon fell into the background, and the meetings have become a typical rendezvous of politicians where good beer and liquor flow freely, along with irresponsible oratory.

The present meeting at Mackinac Island has been made the occasion to lambast President Coolidge for his alleged neglect of the farmers. The governors of those arid and wind-swept commonwealths, Iowa and Nebraska, were particularly incensed. They were evidently suffering from the sun and heat they had lately left.

After all, why should the country take stock in the utterances of men of this type on national questions? Practically every governor in the land is a politician whose first purpose is to get and hold votes, and whose views on national issues are purely those of the party leaders or clique to which he happens to belong. Every governor in the corn and wheat belts would not hesitate to play politics with farm relief, and to advocate the most impossible schemes if they believed they were popular and that such advocacy would help to keep them in office. Probably the most unreliable exponent of government and legislation is a crowd of politicians gathered at a summer resort. For pure unadulterated buncombe it could hardly be equalled.

THE ELECTION IN MEXICO

The approaching Mexican national election is of great interest to the United States. The paramount issue is well defined. It is whether President Calles is to remain in power, supporting policies of confiscation and agrarianism toward the United States that have caused our government so much trouble during recent years, or whether a rival candidate will be elected who possesses more liberal concepts of international amity, and who is willing to adopt a more conciliatory attitude toward the United States.

There are four contestants for the presidency. They include beside Calles, General Obregon, who has previously served in this capacity, General Francisco Serrano and General Gomez. Of these candidates it is reasonably safe to assume that the United States would prefer to see the election of former President Obregon. There would appear to be a better prospect of peace and understanding between Mexico and the United States under Obregon than any of the others...although it is only fair to Gomez and Serrano to say that their attitude toward this country, as expressed in their manifestos, is friendly. They are, however, comparatively unknown, while Obregon's past record of fairness and generosity in his relations with this country would seem to invite an improvement in the existing unsatisfactory situation. Moreover, Obregon possesses ability, together with a temperament that admits of reason and conciliation. He has in the main been disposed to be fair as public opinion in Mexico would permit him to be.

As to the local issues that may determine the results of the contest, we in the United States know but little, and even that little does not make us a competent judge of the merits of Mexican domestic policy. However, public opinion in the United States will incline to the view that the election by Mexico of a president disposed to meet the views of the United States in foreign policies would best serve the interests of the Mexican people themselves.

A NOVEL BUSINESS

A society woman, daughter of a banker, is the head of a unique business in New York city and it is a business that should have great possibilities in any city. It is a bureau of personal service that Miss Jessie Jerome Fanshaw heads, and although she has been in business only since last January, she has built up a clientele and employs a large force of assistants.

Miss Fanshaw's service is novel in that it does things for people that they ordinarily find too troublesome to do themselves. For instance, she will close a town house or apartment after a family has gone to Europe or Newport and then set the house in order prior to their return. She provides chaperones, fills rush orders for hostesses, secures entertainment, does shopping for clients, buys theatre tickets for them, orders flowers, makes up programs, does temporary secretarial work and in all other ways stands between her clients and the thousands of details which they find a bore but which have to be done.

That the idea is not impractical is testified by her success and leads to the assumption that the scheme would work out in any city of fair size where there are enough moneyed people who want things done and who would be willing to pay to have them done. Life today is a complicated business and many people find themselves cluttered up with a multitude of details they would like to pass on to someone else, yet have not sufficient work to maintain a secretary.

As an emergency service, a bureau such as that established by Miss Fanshaw would be a distinct advantage to any large community and would be economical for clients, inasmuch as they only pay for service performed and do not have to pay salaries during times when the service is not needed.

In the summer has a general ring, probably will strain right up, to everybody taking a hand in the interpretation of the royal visitors. Ho, hum! We wonder how his highness likes bread and jam.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician And Author

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. Writer's names are never printed. Only inquiries of general interest are answered in this column, but all letters will be answered by mail if written in ink and a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Requests for diagnosis or treatment of individual cases can not be considered. Address Dr. William Brady, in care of this paper.

FATTY'S BEDTIME STORY

Remember our friend the model fat boy. At age 47, being 65 inches high, he discovered he weighed 149 pounds, and being just healthfully alarmed about this he squandered a 10 spot on a health examination and one of the first sad flaws the heartless doctor picked in the fat boy's condition was an oxygen deficiency—the fat boy could hold his breath only 31 seconds without preparation whereas he ought to hold it 40 or 45 seconds and the fact about ten years earlier he had held it 50 seconds. This the doctor cruelly intimated, meant that the fat boy was just easing along on a rather thin margin of reserve power. In a firm but gentle way the doctor tried to make the poor fat understand that a fellow who can't coast along for 40 seconds without drawing breath is in no kind of shape to fight a battle with pneumonia, appendicitis or even a frail or sickly neighbor.

The first "indication" in the rehabilitation of the fat boy, the doctor concluded from the results of the health examination, was reduction of the insidious corpulence. This seemed most readily-attainable by going back along the trail that had led to obesity. Some of the relevant questions in the health examination elicited the confession that the fat boy had been in the habit of eating a late lunch every night—just a few knick-knacks, you know, no formal meal. The doctor at once pounced on this knick-knacking and insisted on analyzing the menus, and here are some of the trifles the fat boy habitually ingested at an evening, over and above his regular day's rations:

Thursday night lunch:
One pint of milk 325 calories
Six soda crackers 162 calories

Monday night lunch:
Lemon pie, man size piece 210 calories

Glass of milk 160 calories

Saturday night lunch:
Twelve milk crackers 204 calories

Swiss cheese, 3/4 ounce 93 calories

Sunday night lunch:
Three ounces of popcorn 350 calories

One half ounce of lard 130 calories

One half ounce of butter 112 calories

Wednesday night lunch:
Four sugar cookies 240 calories

Glass of milk 160 calories

Friday night lunch:
Three ounces of peanuts 360 calories

Tuesday night lunch:
Man Sandwich 220 calories

One apple, medium size 120 calories

Thus the model fat boy tucked away an average of 400 calories every evening, by estimate, though in reality the lunch more likely yielded around five hundred calories.

It is an axiom of nutrition that almost anybody may gain 20 pounds in a year by increasing the daily rations by 400 calories. It is just as certain that almost anybody who is overweight may reduce by reversing the process, though this in indeed a painful kind of treatment for such a comfortable affliction as moderate or trial size obesity.

Housomede, the doctor persuaded the model fat boy to try to worry along for a while without any bedtime lunch, and the fat boy promised to try. We'll see how he comes on with it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Hyperthyroidism

Can you recommend a good M. D. for one who has been two years under the following doctors' treatment (Four physicians mentioned). I am 25 years old, single, 68 inches tall, 120 pounds. All these doctors think an operation is not necessary. I've rested till I guess I'm rusty, and I do a three or four mile "ankle exercise" daily. (F. W.)

Answer—They're all good doctors to stick to. A regimen precisely like that best for pulmonary tuberculosis is generally helpful.

Another Daniel

What's the cause and cure of chicken pox on an infant? Origin of name? Is this business of removing tonsils from a human being really necessary?

When tonsils are inflamed should not the cause be cured, rather? The physical culture says this is needless slaughter. Read chatter and advise. (C. W. L.)

Answer—Pocks or pox are spots in the skin. Chicken pox (varicella) is an infectious disease characterized by feverishness perhaps with chill or vomiting and pains in back and legs, coming on after an incubation period of 10 to 15 days (from time of exposure) and culminating in the eruption of papules or vesicles after 24 hours of illness. These usually contain only clear or turbid fluid, unless scratched, and then they become ulcerated and may leave scars. They are blebs rather than pimples or boils. Chicken pox is the least dangerous of all eruptive infectious diseases. Sometimes, in spite of the care, tail lecturer and A. Chesty Strongboy. B. V. D. it is really necessary to remove tonsils from a human being.

THE MAGIC CARPET

LIBRARY ADVENTURES

By Arnold Mulder

A NEW FIELD IN CRITICISM

The recent publication of "The Road to Xanadu," by Professor Lowes, seems to point the way to a new fashion in literary criticism, setting the pace in that field just as James Elford and Lytton Strachey set the pace a few years ago for a new kind of biography, the "psychograph," which may have many practitioners.

I have not yet read "The Road to Xanadu" and I am not reporting on it here. Its general character is however plain enough, and judging from the reviews it does supervinently well a thing that others have done fairly well. It is difficult, but now that some one has shown how well it can be done, given great enough scholarship and great enough originality of imagination, it may be expected that others will follow suit.

"The Road to Xanadu," as all the reviews will tell you, is a study of the sources of "Kubla Khan" and "The Ring of the Ancient Mariner." All the reviewers seem to agree that it is much more than the usual study of sources that it tracks to earth all the materials that directly or indirectly went to the making of those poems. Its significance, still accepting the assertions of the reviewers, lies in the fact that it is itself a work of creative art and not merely a book of literary statistics.

A great deal of the so-called original research into the sources of works of art is merely that and nothing more. Scholars win their Ph. D. degrees with that sort of thing and no one ever cares to read the book except they themselves and perhaps their wives if the writers happen still to be heroes to their wives. When such a scholar fills a whole book with the different ways in which Wordsworth mentions colors in his poems he calls the result scholarship.

To the person interested in the realities of literature that sort of thing is waste of white paper but the vital sources of great art, the stray hints and incidents and moods in the life of the author or in his surroundings on which his creative mind brooded and which, in the fullness of time it transmuted into great art, these things have a fascination that makes them worthy of minutes study.

Edgar Allan Poe, who was the first to do many things in literature, was at least one of the first to give a hint 75 years ago of this new field in literature which now seems about ready to be intensively cultivated. He told his readers what went to the making of his poem, "The Raven." It was done sketchily and without the painstaking and accurate scholarship credited to Professor Lowes, but it was at least proof that Poe's versatile mind had seen the value of such an attempt. Where Professor Lowes devotes a whole book to two poems, in his poems he calls the result scholarship.

"KEEP OFF" PLACARDS REMOVED AT CAPITOL

Lawn at State Park Now Open to Tourists and State Residents

MADISON—(AP)—Madison's state park—the capitol grounds—has been "opened to the public."

Only tiny marks remain in the spacious lawns about the state building where "Keep Off the Grass" signs were stuck in the ground. The state superintendent of public property had the signs removed, and for the first time in several years Madison residents and visiting tourists are allowed to use the grassy slopes.

Clinton E. Ballard, the superintendent today said that he disliked to keep Wisconsin people "to whom the property really belongs," and the state's visitors, off the grounds. He said that the grass has reached a sufficient "stand" that the lawns will not be damaged.

PROTECTED PROPERTY

The "Keep Off" signs were left upon the grounds, during the spring and early summer, he said, to protect the state's "investment in beauty"—the flowers, shrubs and grass of the yard.

Investigation in the superintendent's office reveals that more than $1,000 was spent this year on the beautification of the Capitol lawn, aside from the funds used by each department in maintaining window flower boxes. Most of the sum went toward flowers that are spread in beds around the yard and in sidewalk centers and ends.

HAS LARGE STAFF

Additional expenses in making the setting for the Capitol a beautiful one, are salaries of a gardener, two yard men, mowers, and extra help on occasion. Each morning members of the lawn force "police" the grounds to remove paper and other debris. In addition to the lawn force there is one police officer in charge of the parking of state employees' cars and general conduct of persons on the grounds.

The superintendent declared that since the opening of the grounds to public use one request to hold a picnic in the Capitol square had been refused. Similar requests will be treated likewise, he said.

CLINIC ON RESERVATION ARRANGED FOR INDIANS

MILWAUKEE—(AP)—A Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association clinic crew of five members will hold a three-day free "chest clinic" on the Lac du Court O'Reilly Reservation in Sawyer County beginning Aug. 1, as a part of the program to cut down the high death rate from tuberculosis among the Indians on this reservation.

The clinic, which is being arranged for by James P. Ryer, supervisor of Indian work, is to be paid for jointly by funds for Indian work and by the annual sale of Christmas Seals.

This is the first clinic which the association has held on the Lac du Court O'Reilly Reservation. However, in 1921, 251 residents of the Oneida Reservation were examined and in 1925, 629 at the Odanah Reservation took the association tests.

CARNIVAL WRESTLER MAY RECEIVE MEDAL

Frank Baronowski Saved Lives of Three Persons Last Summer

Efforts of the chamber of commerce to locate Frank Baronowski, wrestler with the Dodson carnivals, have succeeded and an attempt is being made to secure a Carnegie medal for him, according to Hugh G. Corbett, secretary of the chamber. Baronowski, whose show name is LeMark, was here last year with the carnival, and while on his way to Manitowoc saved three Appleton people from drowning.

A party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Payzant, and daughter Ida, and Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Tinkham, was thrown into the Branch lake on Federal highway 10 between Branch and Whitelaw, when Mrs. Payzant turned out too far to pass a Manitowoc-Appleton bus on a bridge over the lake. The motorists fell into 17 feet of water and none could swim. LeMark, who was a passenger on the bus, dove into the lake and rescued Mrs. Payzant. Mrs. Tinkham and Ida Payzant, he also attempted to rescue Mr. Payzant, but he was pinned under the car. The bus driver, Ralph Crocker, Manitowoc, pulled Mr. Tinkham with a fishpole.

LeMark will appear here again this year in August with the Dodson shows. Meanwhile Mr. Corbett has written to the Carnegie foundation, enclosing letters from Mr. and Mrs. Tinkham and Mrs. Payzant, describing the accident and praising LeMark's heroism. His modesty after the incident also was commended in the letter.

Why we sell the DUNLOP TIRE

FOR 39 YEARS Dunlop has been building the world's supreme tire. Dunlops wear longer because Dunlop knows how to build better at each vital point.

Take the hidden carcass beneath the tread. Dunlop owns its own cotton mills for no other purpose than to spin the best long-fibre cotton into the famous cable-twist cord that goes into this carcass.

The extra strength in these cords means an added factor of safety against constant load and pounding of roads—longer life and greater mileage.

The extra "stretch" enables the carcass to give under severe blows, and to come back into its original position without internal injury.

The Dunlop tread—the toughest rubber development known—wears slowly and smoothly, making sure that you get out of your Dunlops, all the extra mileage that added care and longer experience have built into them. We recommend that you put Dunlops on your car.

Hooked Rugs So Popular In Martha Washington's Time Prove Equally Attractive In Modern Homes

By SARAH EATON GARRETT
WHILE the craze for hooked rugs runs high, why not hook your own? There is creative joy in watching the flowers and birds emerge from nowhere, and hooked rugs when done add a quaint pleasure note to any room.

To really appreciate hooked rugs and get yourself in the mood for making one you should know something about their history. For they are one more indication of how we, in this 20th century, are turning back to the art of our ancestors for beauty.

REVOLUTIONARY DAYS

Everybody had hooked rugs in Revolutionary days. The Puritan grandmothers used up all their old scraps of dresses, red flannel under shirts, blankets and household materials making them. Martha Washington even hooked them for Mount Vernon. They were "the" floor covering until the smooth machine-made rugs usurped their place.

The thrifty New England housewife used to save her scraps. Often yarn was used, dyed with leaves and barks gathered in the woods. She used burlap bags that had brought tea from China or sugar from the South for the frame upon which the pattern was drawn and the rug hooked. She utilized all the materials at hand and when a certain color gave out she filled in with another kind of scrap, seemingly not at all perturbed if the change of color came right in the center of a flower.

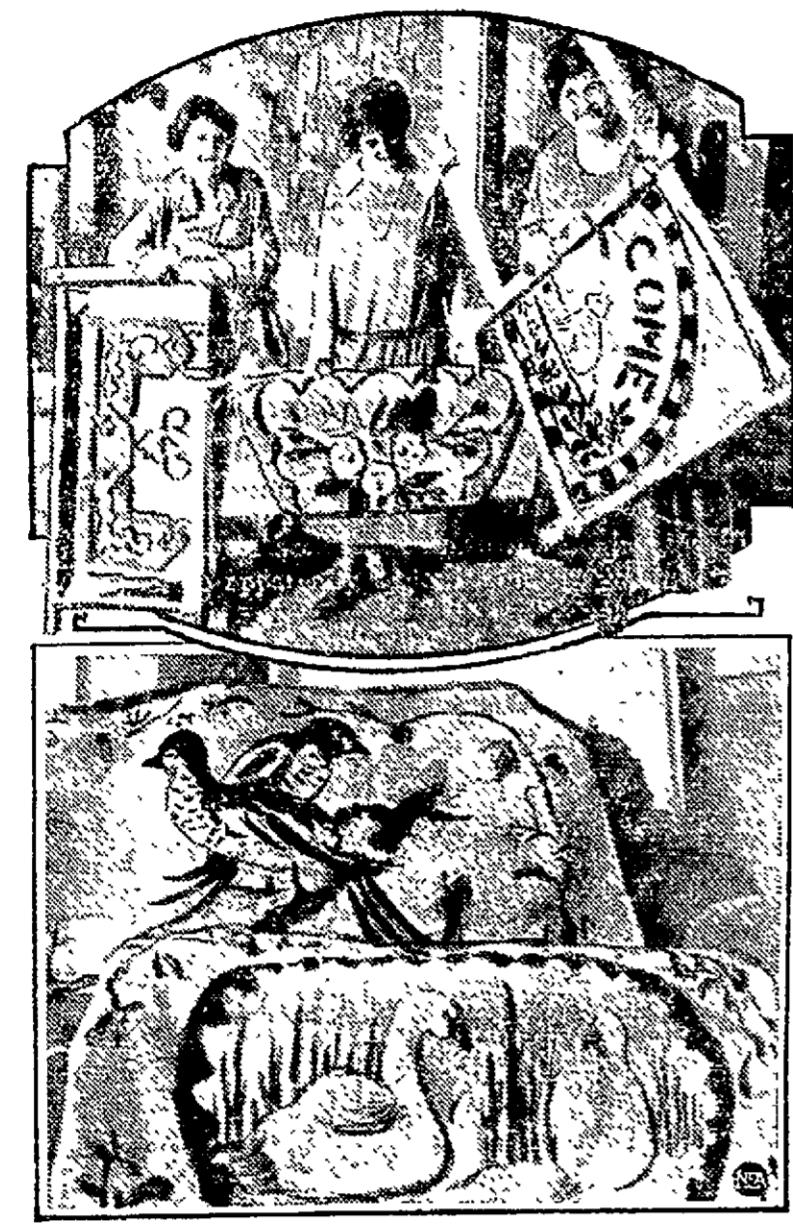

Designs were copied from old oil-cloths, or the flower garden or the family pets formed the motif.

MAKING YOUR OWN

While antiques give pleasure by their beauty, a woman will never get the thrill out of owning one that she can have, if she will hook her own. It is an adventure to see the colorful picture grow under your very own hands.

You can get the softness of antique colors by using faded swans or dyeing them with pastel shades. Out-of-flamed pajamas, dresses, old sheets, silk stockings, even the children's play clothes can be washed out into half-inch wide strips, and dried. Set your colors with salt and choose whether your rug will be cotton or wool, as one material should be used throughout. Silks make lovely rugs; but are not durable. You can buy burlap already stamped, or draw your own pattern.

SIMPLE TOOLS
The simple tools you need are a frame shears, a rug hook and pend on how thick you wish to make your rug. One half inch loops make a nice thick rug.

Having formed the first loop, punch your loop through again, very near to the first loop, and pull a second loop through to the same height as your first loop. Start in the right hand corner of your pattern and work straight across to the left hand corner. Begin again at the right and work to the left on the second row. Continue until the width of the border is hooked, always drawing the end up on the right side of the burlap and cut even with the loops.

THE DESIGN

Now take the colors called for and work out your design. It is so good idea to outline your pattern in color first to guide you in filling it in. Complete hooking the entire pattern and then fill in the background in straight lines, always hooking from right to left.

If one wishes a "slipped" rug, pull the loops up to almost an inch and then cut off even with sharp scissors when the rug is completed. This gives a soft, rich surface and many prefer this. New England girls, however, taught Puritan housewives to wait until their rugs had become worn before clipping. Shearing made them look like new again.

There is a kind of magic, you will find in a hooked rug you have made yourself. They will give atmosphere to a house, and at the same time satisfy your creative instincts.

MARGOT'S FASHIONS

Baste the burlap for your rug to this ticking, pulling it taut.

To begin your rug, take any of the halimich strips in the left hand under the rug. Push your hook down right on the line of the design, hook up the strip, pull it through the burlap, and form a loop, the height de-

SAINT AND SINNER

By Anne Austin

Her baby was exactly three weeks old when Cherry came home from the hospital. Ten-year-old Joy, at the suggestion of Dr. Atkins, who had been concerned about her death, had been packed off, jubilant, to a girl's camp in the mountains. In place of her bed in Cherry's room stood a beautiful little crib, painted a pale green, with tiny clusters of pink roses. Cherry surveyed her changed room with shining, golden eyes, then grinned a little ruefully at Faith. "I don't know what in the world I'm going to do with this little red-headed brat of mine. If she cries during the night I'll be perfectly helpless. The baby didn't sleep with me, you know—slept in the infant's ward, along with forty-seven other champion little squakers. But there was no chance of my getting somebody else's baby by mistake. Not with that hair of hers!"

She was holding the baby on her lap, and to Faith, looking on with fond, amused eyes, she seemed like a little girl playing with a doll—a particularly lifelike little doll, chosen because of its copper-and-gold fluff matching her own short, rioting hair.

"I'm going to keep her in my room for a few nights, until you're stronger," Faith decided suddenly.

"Oh, would you?" Cherry was pathetically relieved and grateful. "—I feel so helpless. Isn't she a love, Faith? Did you ever see a more beautiful baby in all your life. Her precious skin is getting to be as white as milk. I do believe she's going to have a complexion just like mine," she added complacently. "With your eyes and my hair and complexion this little midget is going to grow into a jewel, aren't you, you precious?"

When Faith called Bob from the living room, where he was browsing, through the Sunday paper, to remove the crib from Cherry's room to their own, he gave her one long, level look, then shrugged his shoulders slightly. It was a look that said as plainly as words, "I might have expected this. You're going to be like baby's slave, spare-Cherry all the bother and worry of raising her baby, spoil it and her, just as you've always spoiled Cherry."

Faith flushed, but with Cherry looking on, the lids drooping with weariness over her golden eyes, she could not justify herself. And she wanted the baby. It had been a positive agony to give the child back to the nurse at the hospital. The very flesh of her arms ached in loneliness and almost terrifying desire for the fee of the tiny body. "ow, as Cherry sat with the infant in her lap, fluffing the red-gold fluff that was already long enough to show an enchanting curl, Faith felt an almost fierce jealousy. It was all she could do to keep from snatching the baby from its mother. She was passionately grateful to Cherry for her helplessness, which would give into her own hands the sole care of the infant, during the nights at least. There was only a fleeting tear in regard to Bob. Of course he would not like it just at first—having the baby in their hitherto sacredly private bedroom, the only privacy they had managed to keep after the arrival of the family—but he would get used to it; he would love the baby, too, already loved it with indulgent amusement.

Bob, with a grim look on his face, carried the crib from Cherry's room.

TOMORROW: The baby brings complications into Cherry's life.

LOIS MORAN'S "TWIN" ON FIRST STEP OF LADDER TO FAME IN MOVIES

BY DAN THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—Doris Hill is following right in the footsteps of Lois Moran. They look somewhat alike and both came to the movies from the stage.

About the only difference between these two girls, who never knew each other until they met on a Hollywood lot, is in their hair. Lois is a cross between a blonde and a brunet, while Doris flaunts flaming locks. Photographically they might be twins.

So much has been heard of Lois Moran that she often is considered almost an old-timer in movieland. She made her debut in this world in March, 1919, which is plenty of proof that she can't be so very old. Doris was born in the same month, but didn't get started in the movie racket as early as her "twin."

It is strange how the careers of these children—which is all they really are—have shaped themselves along the same lines although Lois was born in Pennsylvania and Doris in New Mexico.

MISSES MORAN made her bow on the stage in Paris with the Paris Grand Opera Company at the age of 13. The following year she branched into films, making two pictures for a French company. That was before American producers were going completely crazy about foreign actresses.

Returning to New York after her second pictures, Lois went on the road with the stage production, "The Wisdom Tooth." Then she came to Hollywood to start her American film career. Her first pictures was "Stella Dallas," in which she was supposed to have the principal feminine role—but as all movie fans know, "Stella Dallas" was Belle Bennett, no one else. Since then Lois has signed with Paramount for a series of pictures, her latest being "Soundings."

DORIS HILL has been dancer since childhood—which might mean that she started anywhere from two to ten years ago. Whenever she could spare the time from her schoolwork, she has taken dancing engagements in theaters in various parts of the country. It was while dancing in Los Angeles a year ago that she attracted the attention of film producers.

Doris' first picture was with Sid Chaplin. Then she made two other films. It was largely because of her resemblance to Lois Moran that Doris was "discovered" by a Paramount director and given a long-term contract.

And, following in her "twins" footsteps, she has made good. Her last role was with Clara Bow in "Rough House Rosie" in which she was given very few opportunities to show her ability. But the "breaks" are bound to come her way sooner or later.

BRUSH EYEBROWS

TO MAKE THEM PRETTY AND NEAT

BY MME. ANNE GERARDE

EYEBROWS are the most neglected of all features. And a graceful, full, arch-lined is really most essential to beauty.

Eyebrows that are too thick should be plucked enough to make them symmetrical and well-groomed. Too much plucking, however, gives a stupid expression even to an intelligent face.

This eyebrows should be massaged twice daily with yellow vaseline. All eyebrows should be brushed daily as you brush your hair. Use tiny eye-brush for this purpose.

Brush the wrong direction first to get the dust out. Then brush in the right direction for neatness. Finally, beginning at inside line, punch each eyebrow with thumb and first finger to shape them and be sure to give proper arch. An arched brow lends an intriguing something to the eye.

Use make-up pencil very sparingly, if ever. And then only use it to elongate by gently extending the outside curve. Eyebrows should remain the same shade as the hair, never darkened noticeably.

POLITICS FOR WOMEN

Atlanta (UPI)—While admitting politics is a man's game, Bessie Kempton, Georgia's only woman legislator, believes a woman can play it without displaying any trace of manliness.

Miss Kempton has started her third successive term as representative from Fulton County.

Although she has been in the legislative body for four years she still has her first "real" speech to make. She lets the men do the talking.

Men lawmakers, she believes, are more interested in politics than women are.

These styles are being influenced by the mode of hairdressing, for in Paris today the boyish bob is almost as far behind the style as the old-fashioned pompadours of our mothers' girlhood.

Feminine line has triumphed and all those who wield the scissors, dressmakers and coiffeurs alike, are cutting with new ideals of lines that are softening and womanly.

Little curls that lie close to the ears and the forehead, or nestle at the nape of the neck are advocated by Paris hairdressers as an antidote to the sleek, manish haircut of last winter. For those who cannot go so far, curly there are soft waves and mild frizzes.

SATIN UNDIES

Sofit satin undergarments are in high favor. They are trimmed with contrasting lace or tucked georgette or hand-worked bandings.

In harmony with the tendency towards "old-fashioned" costumes, the tulip cape with elaborate patterns worked in narrow Valenciennes lace has been designed. These capes hang down well to the hem of the dress and barely cover the elbows at the sides. Some are cut with a long point in back and fasten with ribbons in a fitch front.

Reboux's contribution to the swing towards the styles of the empire days is a collection of hats with lace ruffled brims, a frill of lace being sewed just under the edge of the hat, which is small and frames the face.

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

OF COURSE the bunch soon realized that the fluffy candy made them white. Marshmallows flew. "Well, our first was fun. You're very both thick and fast. It was a thrill, I mean, to leave. You don't run. Let's all sit down and rest." "What, I'm so tired, I can't move?"

"Oh, what's the difference?" Chippy said. "Let's fight till we come out ahead. This candy can't hurt anyone, so there's no fight to fear. This battle's really all in just a minute." Just then a candy came in the water, and the tiny ones had a chance to catch it on their bare hands.

"I think I'm getting too tired to move," the tiny ones said.

Another voice then interceded and started the tiny ones off again. "My goodness! You're a party animal! You mustn't fight all the time. You're not friends made for war. What's more, everybody's got to eat. I think this isn't very 'cool,' you know."

This made the tiny ones stop.

The man snapped. "I'm not a fool."

Side Show Is Feature At Picnic

A "side show" will be one of the features of the annual picnic for members of the Appleton Maennerchor, their families and friends to be held Sunday at Alleluia park. The picnic will commence at 11 o'clock and at 12 o'clock a basket lunch will be served.

Races for boys and girls, rope pulling and bag jumping contests and many other amusements have been arranged by the committee in charge. A program of songs will be given by the Maennerchor and the ladies chorus in the afternoon.

Jacob Hopfengartner is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for the affair and will be assisted by Louis Weber, Otto, Reetz, Joseph Obermeyer and Kurt Haertel.

Word has been received by the Appleton Maennerchor that Manitowoc will not accept the 1928 Saengerfest. It was voted at the state convention of the East Wisconsin Saenger Beerk July 8, 9 and 10 at Wausau to offer the convention to Manitowoc. The state officers will have charge of selecting another city for the convention next year.

NEENAH WOMAN AT NATIONAL W.B.A. MEETING

Mrs. Catherine McGregor of Neenah, district deputy of the Womens Benefit association, is expected to arrive home Saturday from Port Huron, Mich., where she attended the national convention of the Womens Benefit association held from July 18 to 23. The convention was attended by officers and deputies of the organization from all over the world. The W. B. A. is the largest fraternal benefit society for women in the world.

Miss Bina M. West of Port Huron, founder of the organization, was elected supreme president for the fifth consecutive time. Other supreme officers are: Past president, Mrs. Carrie L. Mc Dannel of Buffalo, N. Y.; supreme vice president, Mrs. Albert V. Droole, Detroit, Mich.; supreme secretary, Miss Frances D. Partridge, Port Huron, Mich.; supreme treasurer, Mrs. M. Louise Hinrichs, Chicago, Ill.; supreme chaplain, Mrs. Ethel Hayford, Adrian, Mich.; supreme lady of ceremonies, Mrs. Ada R. Stone, Butler, Pa.; supreme sergeant, Mrs. Lois E. Coles, Baltimore, Md.; supreme outer hostess, Mrs. Belle M. Barnard, Los Angeles, Calif.; supreme inner hostess, Mrs. Isabelle K. Brandt, Houston, Texas; supreme captain, Mrs. Jennie M. Little, Toledo, Ohio; supreme color bearer No. 1, Mrs. Catherine Erickson, Butte, Mont.; supreme color bearer No. 2, Mrs. Gertrude Voss of Milwaukee; Mrs. Mine O. Smith, Bellevue, Ohio, honorary past supreme commander who was the installing officer.

Mrs. Katie Leith of this city attended the W. B. A. camp at Port Huron for a week before the convention.

MOOSE LEGION HOLDS PICNIC AT CEDAR LAKE

A picnic for members of the Fox River Valley Mooseheart legion and their families will be held in connection with the Moose frolic Sunday at Cedar lake near West Bend. The picnic will be held in conjunction with the picnic of the West Bend Order of Moose.

Games and contests have been planned for the children and there will be special entertainment for women during the afternoon. A band concert will be given in the afternoon and a dance will be held in the evening. The frolic will commence at about 1:30.

Large delegations of members and their families from Green Bay, Kaukauna, Appleton, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Sheboygan, Chiltonville and West Bend are expected to attend the picnic.

CHURCH SOCIETIES

The Christian Mother societies of St. Joseph and St. Theresa churches will approach Holy Communion in a body at the 8 o'clock mass Sunday morning at St. Joseph church in honor of the feast of St. Anne according to an announcement by Miss Peter Bosch. The members of both societies are to meet at 7:45 at the parish hall. The feast of Portulaca will be observed at St. Joseph church on Aug. 7.

More than 100 persons were served at the ice cream social Wednesday evening at the home of John Kiess, route 2, Greenville given under the auspices of the Young People society of the Greenville Lutheran church. Contests and games were held in connection with the social. Ruben Kiess was chairman of the refreshment committee and John Stoitzman was chairman of the entertainment.

COUNTY POSTS WON'T HOLD BEAUTY RACE

Up to Individual Posts to Pick Local Entrants if They Wish

It is up to the individual posts in the county to determine if they will hold bathing beauty contests to choose representatives in the statewide contest to be held in connection with the annual state American Legion convention at Marinette this fall, members of the Outagamie County council of the legion decided at the regular July meeting Thursday evening at New London. When the Oneida Johnston post, the largest in the county, refused to sponsor a contest in Appleton, it was thought that a competition for all county posts might be held, but the council decided against it.

Plans for the state convention were discussed after talks by Odgen Clason, Oconto, Ninth district commander; Col. F. J. Schneidler, Neenah, Sixth district commander, and Harry Ransom, Milwaukee, chairman of the Milwaukee County council.

Matters discussed included the financing of the convention by the state department, a reduction in state legion officers, and a decision on carrying on the present contract with the Badger Legionnaire, state legion publication. No action was taken on any matter.

Appleton legionnaires at the meeting were A. C. Bossier, county secretary and local service officer; Harvey Priebe, commander of Johnston post; F. F. Wheeler, post adjutant, and R. M. Connally.

Because She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The fertile valleys of Oregon help to supply the tables of America

This is possible thru the magic of the humble tin can.

In one of the canning establishments, Julia Schmidt was employed. It was complicated work because she did sealing and other parts of the work.

She tried various medicines. At last a friend of hers spoke of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Miss Schmidt gave it a trial.

"Everyone says I am a healthier and stronger girl," she writes. "I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to all my friends who tell me how they suffer and I am willing to answer letters from women asking about it." Julia Schmidt's address is 113 Willow St., Silverton, Oregon. For sale by druggists.

25,000 THRILLED BY CIRCUS PERFORMERS

Ringling Brothers Present Interesting Show in Biennial Visit

Probably 25,000 men, women and children were more or less thrilled by the galaxy of performers in the huge program presented by Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey circus here Thursday afternoon and evening. The attendance was not as large as the record breaking crowd in the "big top" at the last visit of the show here two years ago but nevertheless it was quite satisfactory to the circus management. The afternoon attendance was slightly larger than the evening performance.

There were quite a number of stunts which were familiar to those who saw the show two years ago but there were a sufficient number of new acts to keep interest at a high pitch. Lillian Leitzel, called the world's greatest gymnast, hasn't changed her act much in the last two or half dozen years but her stunt is difficult and sensational enough to win applause each succeeding year. May Whitham, another standby of the circus, has changed her equestrian act a great deal from two years ago and it is better than ever.

SPLendid TUMBLERS

The show exceeded this year with its umbilical acts and bare-back riding tumbrels. Two or three teams of tumblers have developed tricks of the tail-raising variety which never were seen here before and some of the wire-back riders did what appeared to be almost impossible.

The trapeze and swinging stunts were little different from those seen here a half-dozen times and there was little that was new in the wire-walking and trained seal stunts.

A number of novelties based on current fads and fancies were introduced by the clowns but the crowd again loved that Appleton is a tough town or the funny fellows for the laughs they raised were few and far between.

The crowds, however, were thoroughly appreciative of excellence among the other performers and applauded liberally for each starting act.

APPLETON HIGH GRIDDERS HOPE FOR SUCCESSFUL SEASON

1927 Orange Football Squad Thought To Have Good Chance For Title

Shields May Shift Several Linemen to Rear Wall to Add More Strength

Though the last few days have brought some of the hottest weather of the summer, football followers of Appleton high school already are turning their minds to the fall when cooling breezes, rain and snow will form part of the grid atmosphere. For in spite of the loss of several stars of the third-place 1926 squad, enough good material remains to warrant the Orange its best chance at a Fox River Valley Conference grid banner in several years, barring injuries and indiscretions. The former is the more feared as last year not an athlete was eligible all year.

Several of the boys have been working hard all summer on jobs which include carrying and wheeling concrete, construction work, and working on ice cream trucks. Beside they have been making use of the evenings to pass and kick football around, often working in pairs. This kind of enthusiasm among youths of high school age goes more than halfway in building a successful squad as there are many other things they would rather do in the hot summer months than carry concrete and practice.

East and West Green Bay and Marinette, Appleton's chief rivals this fall, suffer the loss of a few men, all are stars, and Fondy, Oshkosh, Manitowoc and Sheboygan are hit harder, especially Fondy and Manitowoc. Oshkosh looms up as the dark horse, with a team that finished low last year, but always threatened. West loses Quinn and Hussin, its great ends among others and Murphy while will have to develop others as good to take Herber's passes, a tough job. And the Herber to an end pass combination was West's big score play.

East appears the strongest of the three with several sophomores who played half of the games last year, to bolster the regulars. Marinette lost one extra regular this summer by death and the change of coaches and systems after ten years of Tom Johnson's idolized regime, will baffle considerably the first year or so. Still Valley critics expect the Appleton-Marinette game at Marinette early in the season to be a great deciding factor in the race. Appleton beat Marinette at Marinette for the last time back in 1920.

QUARTER CENTER NEEDED

Development of a quarterback and center are the main problems for Coach Joseph Shields. In the rear wall, Lutz, the quarter, Witzke and Giebel are the missing regulars leaving Johnston, all-conference fullback and punter supreme, and Strutz, two-year halfback, as a nucleus. Roemer, a preserve half for two years, is back and is a promising candidate for the quarterback job. Bowby, diminutive second team quarter of last year, and Bob Kunzis are others of promise, though the latter now weighs nearly 150 pounds, all hardened muscle, and may make a better half. He also looks good as a reserve end or in case one of Shields' classy pair is shifted to the rear or tackle, though that is hardly probable. Last year Kunzis was a little light for the rear wall.

In the line the losses include Lieben, center, Kunzis and Laird, guards and Pfeiferle tackle. Lebelacher, a veteran center, will return to school and it was hoped to use him but after a search it was found he was over age.

Rankin, 1926 reserve center, is back and with the development of more fight than last year and ability to pass accurately he may make good. The latter was his weak point last year, always the case with a green first year player, but he has been spending the summer passing to friends. Leading candidates for the guard jobs are Kruse, Popp, Kranholt and Rankin, if another center is found. Rankin was a reserve two years ago and last year was regarded as the best guard on the squad. He played a great game against Shawano in the opener, but broke his leg late in the game, which finished him for the year. His play in basketball and track later showed his leg to be ready for tough action again.

His play in basketball and track later showed his leg to be ready for tough action again.

The tackle candidates, of course, will be lead by Capt. Reuben "Rube" Getchow, husky two-year man, who with Johnston made the all-conference team from the Orange squad last fall. His mate again will be selected from Kruse, Kranholt and several promising second-string tackles of last year. Dresman, a junior, is a good all-around lineman with a little more experience.

The ends are the easiest problem. Coach Shields has but a good reserve needed in case of emergencies, as both suffered last year, one in each period. Schaefer and Hartung, the latter a six-footer, should be the best pair in the circuit. It is very new comers when the 12-6 is an open end and they developed so fast at the time of the Kaukaus in 1926, the team ranked with the conference best. Both are good pass receivers and can run a 100-yard dash speed of 10.2, both under pants, ending the dash with hard deadly tackles. They are expected for that feature and will do well.

Schaefer, Getchow and Hartung are three parts of the famous "Trembling Terrors" of last year, the team Appleton faced through the Varsity.

A MEDALIST

KEN DICKINSON

Defending Champion Turns in 79 Score to Tie Randolph, Kerwin at Oshkosh

Dickinson, defending his title, tied for medalist honors in the 1927 annual meet of the association Thursday at Oshkosh with a score of 79 in the qualifying round. The 1925 state amateur champ who took the 1926 N. E. W. title at Butte des Morts last year was tied for low honors with Sammy Randolph of Manitowoc, classy quarterback of the Beloit college eleven, a few years back, and Frank Kerwin, consistent shooting captain of the Green Bay golf team.

Adolph "Buster" Bock Sheboygan, 1925 N. E. W. champ and present state open champ, finished up in the running as did his teammate, Bobby Testwuide, 1926 association Junior champion. Bock lost his title to Dickinson here last year on the 12th green after a tie match.

Two other Appleton golfers shot their way into the championship flight and with Dickinson were to play their first round matches Friday. They were E. K. Millet and John Powell, a junior player, who with Testwuide is one of the strong contenders for the 1927 association Junior title. Powell had an 84, the same as Bock and one stroke ahead of Testwuide.

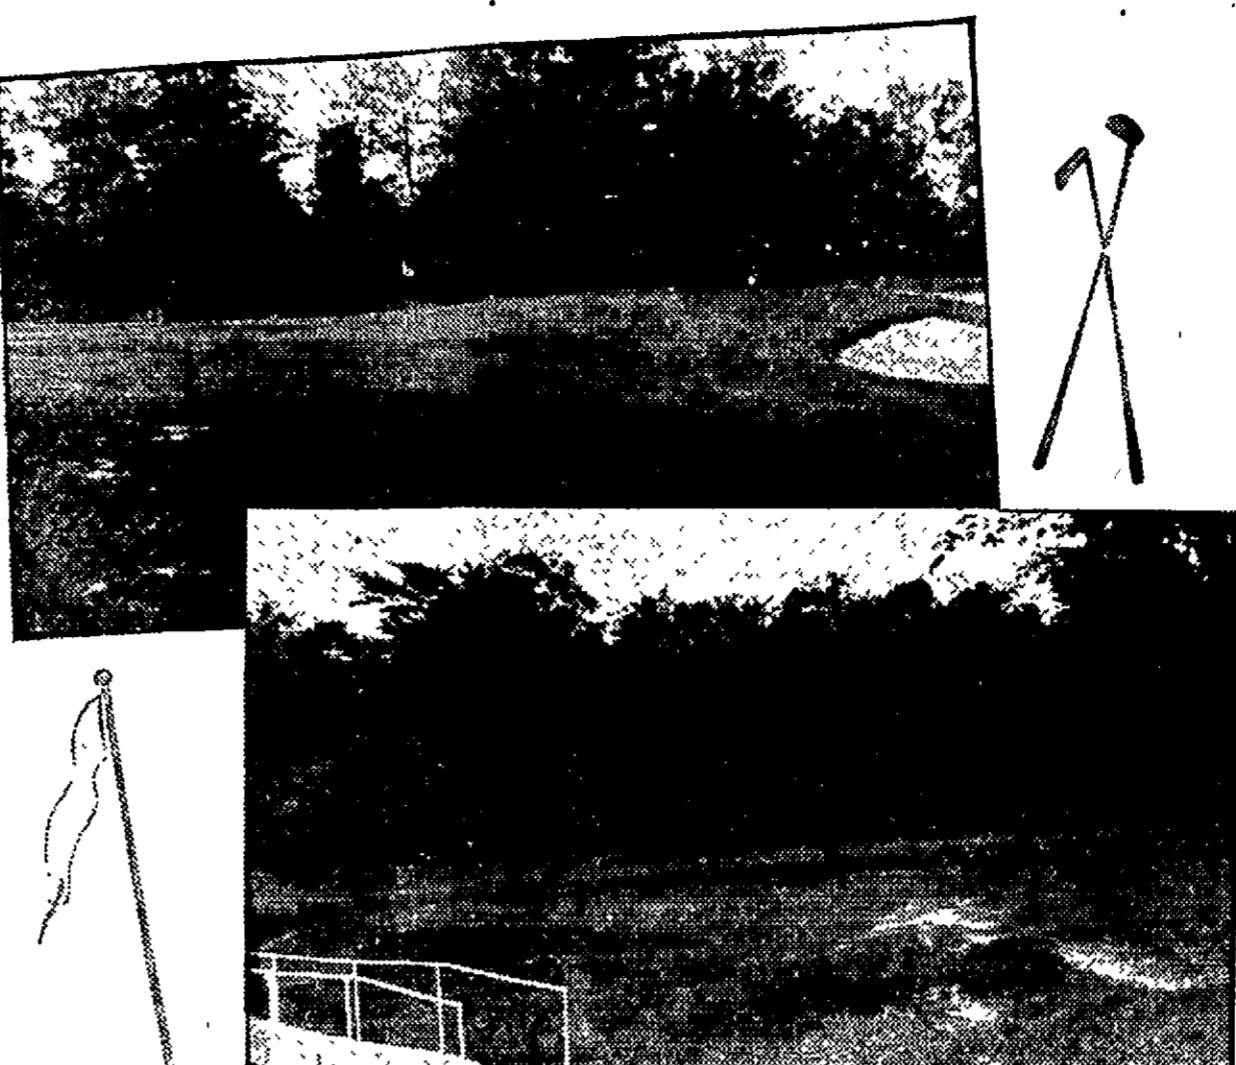

Other championship flight qualifiers are Clayton Wall, Dr. G. A. Stratton, Charles Waite and Mont Hansen, Oshkosh; A. M. Evans, Wausau; A. C. Whitehead and J. R. Simpson, Green Bay; Martin Rowmer and Julius Schilz, Sheboygan.

The play finished late Thursday evening and as a result place winners in the other four flights were not available when the Post-Crescent sport page went to press Friday. A record entry list of 150 played the qualifying round.

DICKINSON TIES FOR MEDAL HONORS IN N. E. W. TOURNAMENT

Defending Champion Turns in 79 Score to Tie Randolph, Kerwin at Oshkosh

THREE TRICKY HOLES FOR STATE MEET

Upper picture, Hole No. 6, the longest hole on the course, 560 yards, between treacherous rough and woods with a highly elevated green of rolling type, guarded by two sand traps. Center-Hole No. 14, tapped by a creek and with woods beyond to snag a long mashie. Lower-Hole No. 7, guarded by a sand trap with trees and rough on both sides.

WISCONSIN golfers in quest of the state amateur golf title will find plenty of trouble in their battle with Old Man Par when they tee off in the state tournament which opens at Butte des Morts on Monday. Golfers from all over the United States have declared it not only one of the most beautiful courses in the country but one of the most tricky. It isn't a real difficult course for the good golfer but the duffer and the man who isn't sure of his tee shots is bound to get into a lot of trouble because of the wide rough, the rolling terrain and the abrupt and high cliffs which border a large number of the fairways. The golfer who can keep his shots well down the fairways will find the going easy for there aren't a great many traps in his way.

PITY THE SLICER

But pity the man who hooks or slices! He is in for a tough time if and when he gets away with par after a poor tee shot he either is a wizard or Lady Luck is grinning at him.

No. 1 is a short 4 par hole but many more fives and sixes are scored on the hole than fours. It is only 330 yards long but the second shot calls for deadly accuracy to be at all certain of a par score. The tee is elevated about 15 feet above the fairway which runs between two high cliffs covered with a rank growth of grass, and a meandering creek runs along the right side of the short grass. The tee shot must be straight to avoid serious trouble. Because the green is elevated above the fairway, a carefully placed shot is required to land on it. The golfer who tries to roll his ball on the green is looking for trouble.

No. 2 is an easy-hole and shouldn't cause any trouble. The green is 325 yards from the tee and the fairway is wide. A drive of 200 yards carries the ball over two shallow valleys and leaves an easy shot for the green.

The third hole is a dog-leg to the left and is not at all difficult for the good golfer but is bad medicine for the careless driver. A slice, unless it is exceptionally bad, still will leave the ball on the fairway, but the second shot will be over two sand traps, not to mention a couple of trees. No. 3 green is large, but level, and a fast low ball from a spoon or midiron is likely to roll over into the rough beyond.

WATCH THE CREEK

The drive from No. 4 tee is over a creek and the fairway is a dog-leg to the right. A creek bisects the fairway at about 240 yards.

A short drive means difficulty in getting the second shot over the creek and a long smash is likely to result in the ball going to the water. A slice is sure to put the ball below the ledge and a difficult second shot will result and a hook is likely to find a landing place in a sand trap.

The green itself is trapped on two sides but doesn't present unusual difficulties. The secret of par on No. 9 is a long and straight tee shot.

The golfer who thinks he is going to have a little easier going when he starts the second 9 holes is due for an awakening. He will find his work cut out for him right at the start for No. 10, while it looks easy, is plenty hard. For one thing it is 425 yards long and is a dog-leg to the left. The green is well back of a sloping mound and many a straight but short brassie shot from the fairway has gone bounding off to the left, from this sloping mound and found a resting place in a sand trap. The over-ambitious driver who socks the ball 250 yards on thereabouts will find his pellet in another sand trap if he pulls it to the right of the green.

No. 11 is another long 4 par hole, 415 yards from tee to green. The tee shot is over a ravine about 150 yards wide on to a straight and high fairway. The green is 150 yards from the tee and should be an easy shot but if the ball lands to the right of the green it is among trees and is a par 6.

ANOTHER LONG HOLE

No. 12 is another long 4 par hole,

415 yards from tee to green. The tee shot is over a ravine about 150 yards wide on to a straight and high fairway.

The green is 150 yards from the tee and should be an easy shot but if the ball lands to the right of the green it is among trees and is a par 6.

THE JINX HOLE

Many a hope for tournament honors will be blasted by No. 6, the longest hole on the course.

The ball will have to be walloped hard and straight to score a par 5 on the 560 yard green.

The tee shot is down a fairway between treacherous rough to about 200 yards and all the rest of the way is through the woods. A drive of at least 225 yards followed by a brassie of 200 yards is necessary to give a reasonable chance at par. The green is of the rolling type, highly eleved

and guarded by two sand traps. Rolling the ball on the green is playing with dynamite and a shot over the green means disaster because of the jungle rough.

No. 7, a 3 par hole about 170 yards long, will present little difficulty for the good golfer.

The tee shot is over a creek and the green is trapped in front by a dense woods and side hill and the sides are covered with jungle to make the going hard. The green responds well to a mashie shot but is hard on the putter.

More than one golfer will find three putts necessary for holing out on that green.

Accuracy and a careful judgment of distance will be necessary to keep out of trouble on No. 12, a 3 par hole

450 yards long. The tee shot is made on an elevated tee cuts a narrow fairway through a woods and the steepest hook or slice means disaster.

A long hook will take the ball

Little difficulty should be exper-

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Attempts have been made on the life of ELISE MARBERYX, an American girl who owns and lives on property adjoining the queer little jungle-bordered town of PORTO VERDE, in west central Brazil.

Several mysterious deaths have occurred, but so far she has escaped harm, due to the shrewdness of her cousin and protector, VILAK, who masquerades as her attorney under the name of DAVIS. Vilak is a curious mixture of American and Oriental blood and a student of criminology. He tries to persuade Elise to leave the country, leaving him there with his friend LINCOLN NUNNALLY, an elderly American chemist, to solve the mystery.

Vilak at first refuses, but after her eleven-year-old orphaned nephew is kidnapped to be found again by the alert Vilak, and another attempt is made on their lives, she agrees.

Her departure is prevented by the threat of floods. Messengers ride through the countryside warning the natives that the dam at Avilos has burst. Then Vilak decides to proceed to the house of one GAYLORD PRENTISS and warn him of the danger. Prentiss is a recluse and a forbidding man, as well as an enemy of Elise's, and she suspects him of some knowledge of the conspiracy against her. Nevertheless, she agrees that it is their duty to warn him.

As they near Prentiss' fazenda, bullets whistle past them. Vilak then realizes that the flood warning was a fake and a ruse to get Prentiss out of his house. Prentiss admits them and Vilak tells him they are about to be attacked.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVIII

Prentiss glanced at Vilak in fright a moment, then suddenly turned and darted out of the room. They heard him mount a flight of stairs, then dart down again.

Vilak, despite the other's absence, swiftly began making a survey of the chamber, from whose limsey walls great sections of plaster and brick had fallen in such quantities that in many places the moonlight showed brightly.

"This room won't do," he muttered. "High-powered bullets would pierce it in a hundred places. Let's look over the house."

He flicked on his flashlight. With Elise and the old man close behind him, he stepped carefully past the raging dog, then swept through room after room of the melancholy structure, disturbing here a few ghostly bats, there an ugly brown-spotted toad. He found nothing which suited his purpose, however, until they had reached a room at the rear. Here a window looked out upon the low stone tower, three or four hundred feet from the house.

"That tower's just the place," he flashed. "Excellent position. Has a view on all sides, and is almost certainly bullet-proof."

They hurried out, crossed the low gully which lay between the tower and the house and strode through the door forming its entrance. A quick examination proved it to be in better state of preservation than the residence, though even here two or three of the red tile scallops of which it was constructed had fallen and lay on the ground. It had evidently been used as a store-room, for it was filled with broken boxes, almost obliterated by cobwebs, and a few rotting pieces of cast-off furniture.

One section, however, separated by a small wooden partition, showed signs of recent use, for here the debris had been cleared away, smoked meats and other kitchen supplies had been brought in and hung from long hooks or were placed on shelves along the wall.

Vilak shrouded a candle and put it in the corner so that it would give them a faint light without being seen outside. Then he smashed an old iron stove with an ax, and taking the separated plates set about sealing up the tower's two small windows. Prentiss hurried in to join them, and shakily aided Vilak in preparing a barrel.

The three men and the girl dragged themselves heavy boxes forward, and with them blocked the narrow doorway. The dirty floor of the room was wet and slippery, making the work more difficult.

Vilak glanced down to ascertain the reason for the dampness and saw in a shadowy corner a tiny thread of water coursing up from the soil.

"Spring from those little lakes on the high ground back of your house?" he demanded of Prentiss.

The other nodded sullenly.

Vilak began making loopholes in the window barriques. "Wet feet won't hurt us. Get rifles, if you've got them."

Prentiss disappeared into the house again, returning with half a dozen new rifles and a box of ammunition. Two of these Vilak put by each window. "I think we're ready for them now," he said. "As ready as we can be."

He began distributing the cartridges. He looked at Elise gravely as he watched her slip a clip of bullets into the chamber of her rifle. "I reproach myself bitterly for having let you come along. Bitterly. Both you and Nanny. But you're here. And what's done is done."

He took another bit of betel, then peered out through one of the window apertures. "Moon's quite bright and I can see plainly, but no signs of attack yet. All of you had better have some cigarettes."

He offered the cigarettes to Elise. She smiled and refused. "Too powerful for me now. Won't be able to shoot straight if I do. I'll take one of Mr. Nunnally's mild ones." She touched his hand. "Don't worry about my being here, or you having brought me here. You didn't. I brought myself. Forget about me. . . . You've far too much to think of anyway Please."

"All right . . . that's ended."

He showed the old man a second time how to operate the rifle. "Think you can do it, Nanny?"

The old man took off his glasses, wiped them nervously, then once more pressed his tiny thumb against the magazine spring. "I . . . er . . . must do it. I must."

Prentiss kept his eyes fixed on the sight of his rifle. "Be sparing of the ammunition. It's the only thing we have. We'll have to make it last a long time."

Vilak took a position beside him. He rubbed a drop of grease from the sight of his rifle. "Be sparing of the ammunition. It's the only thing we have. We'll have to make it last a long time."

Vilak began making loopholes in the window barriques. "Wet feet won't hurt us. Get rifles, if you've got them."

Prentiss disappeared into the house again, returning with half a dozen new rifles and a box of ammunition. Two of these Vilak put by each window. "I think we're ready for them now," he said. "As ready as we can be."

The dog who had been left in the house began to bay again. Suddenly Prentiss jerked his rifle to his shoulder. "Shadows. Shadows. At the gate!" he whispered hoarsely.

"You're right." Vilak swung his rifle into position. "We'll give them a volley. Better let me handle it. Prentiss," he added quietly, when the other, quivering as though from a violent chill, feverishly touched his gun. took wild aim and was about to shoot.

"Don't fire till I say so."

A few seconds later came his placid soothing voice once more. "Steady Steady Good aim Fire"

The reports of four rifles were almost simultaneous. An outcry followed. The shadows disappeared. "Two on the casualty list, I think," Vilak said.

There was a brief interval of inaction. Then the call of the nightbird sounded again, and again vague shadows appeared at the lofty barred entrance. A second volley blazed from the defenders' rifles. Again there was a cry of pain, again the shadows vanished.

"At least one more that time," Vilak grunted. "Learn pretty soon they can't do that. Seem to be intent on forcing the gate. May be afraid the barbed wire on top of the wall has high voltage, but I doubt it."

A third time the attackers tried to reach the gate, a third time they were routed and sprang back into the brush. A brooding silence fell over the fazenda. With her penknife Elise dug out a shell which had struck in the magazine of her rifle; the old man wiped his face with his minute handkerchief; Prentiss kept his glassy eyes fixed to the loophole before him, his lips constantly moving though they emitted no sound. Vilak viciously chewed betel nut.

Suddenly heavy firing began in the high branches of the trees along the creek, many feet overlooking the wall. A fusillade of bullets rattled against the house. "Steady Steady," Vilak counselled. "Take your time. Fire at the bursts."

The fusillade continued. Here and there the putt-puttering of a rifle would abruptly cease, mute testimony that a shot of the defenders had found its target. But neither were the bullets of the attackers without effect, as the firing went on plowing often and often through a joint in the inadequate barricade.

The firing ceased for a few moments, then burst out again with increased vigor. The old man gave a low exclamation and dropped his gun.

Vilak decided to fight fire with flood; this time a real flood and not a false alarm.

SPEEDING LEGISLATOR FAILS TO BE EXEMPTED

Madison—(CP)—It is expected that Assemblyman Adam Schilder, Waupaca, will finally have to face charges of violating the speed laws in Juneau.

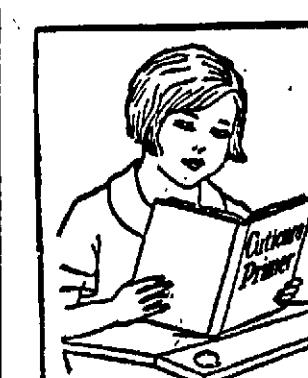

His arrest by Walter Buschkonf, traffic officer, and his detention by Justice of the Peace M. W. Clifford on the traffic law violation charge were the subject of investigation by the assembly and of many letters between state officials and Juneau authorities.

Attorney General Reynolds in an opinion given to Chief Clerk C. E. Schaeffer of the assembly declares that he will be unable to "see that Mr. Schilder's constitutional rights are not infringed upon," as directed by an assembly resolution, because the statutes do not exempt legislators from prosecution in criminal cases.

The assembly passed a resolution when it was found that, despite the promise of Justice Clifford that he intended to do nothing further in the matter, a warrant had been issued for Mr. Schilder's arrest. The resolution asked that the attorney general look into the case and protect the assemblyman under his right to immunity from arrest. The attorney general has found however, that the exemption extended legislators is only for civil cases.

Do You Put Your Closed Car away for the Summer?

TRUE, the closed design does give it a highly special advantage in cold weather—but that's a long way from confining it to being a "winter" car.

In fact, check straight through the year and you'll find that it is actually netting you more comfort and protection in other seasons than in winter!

The year-round sensibleness of using 370 gas is an exact parallel.

Certainly 370 does have the highly specialized advantages of easy starting and quick warm-up so much valued in winter. But run that quality down to its source and true proportion and you'll find this:

1. 370's quick starting is not a quality specially created and standing by itself but is the almost incidental (but inevitable) outgrowth of certain other qualities deemed necessary by Wadham's to produce a truly fit motor fuel.
2. These other qualities, of which quick starting is only an outer manifestation—and proof—are vital to your car-comfort and protection throughout every mile of its life, regardless of temperature or season!

Wadham's 370 —the Year-Round Gasoline produces these qualities by rejecting from its scheme of refining all of the materials from which poor gas can be made.

That is, instead of converting low-test substances into a mock-high, it uses only high-test bases. The kerosene and near-kerosene elements are excluded before manufacture can begin!

Smooth, perfect explosions—the full crowding punch of true gasoline power—the lean mixture of economy—the guarantee against dangerous diluents and residues—are these advantages that your motor should enjoy only in winter? Or does common sense answer that their value must be greatest when your motor is receiving its greatest use?

Today, every Wadham's advantage which has commanded a higher price than regular gasoline comes to you without a penny's added premium. In view of that, not a reason can remain for denying your motor its KNOWN superiority.

Trend Towards Dictatorship
Seen In Government Of Haiti

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington — There is more and more talk about what some persons conceive to be a trend in this country toward a dictatorship such as some of the European countries are sporting, and now comes word that something of the sort is being established on this country's front steps.

Mr. P. Thobey, administrateur delegue of the Union Patriotique d'Haïti, issued vigorous complaint about President Borno's revamping of the Haitian constitution. Twelve articles have been modified and thirteen suppressed, he says, "which amounts to the suppression of the constitution itself."

"All the principles on which modern constitutional reform of his pupil, Louis Borno."

It was the dusky Borno who barred Senator King from Haiti.

Republican politicians and organs are uniting in defense of General Leonard Wood, governor general of the Philippines who recently returned to this country and whose resumption of his post in Manila is in doubt.

Wood has come in for considerable criticism because of his undiplomatic handling of the Filipinos, but it appears there is something to be said on both sides.

In contrast to the reception given Wood on his return was the reception on the return from Turkey of Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, who served eight years as American High Commissioner at Corfu. Apparently no one has been able to pick any holes in Bristol's splendid performance in the difficult and delicate job he has just relinquished. He kept out of the limelight during his brief stay in Washington, but everywhere one found nothing but praise for his past achievements and confidence in his ability to handle any and all problems which will confront him in the Far East.

The Navy is appropriately proud of Commander Richard E. Byrd's flight and adventure for Byrd is a naval officer. But it is a curious fact that when Byrd was still on Long Island, and the newspapers were constantly assailing the day he would leave that day or the next morning, the only criticism of his delay in hopping off was heard around the Navy Department.

The Byrd flight was dubbed by some naval officers as the "con-start flight" and one higher-up ventured, to suggest that the newspapers could get

Byrd to start if they would take him off the front page for a day or two.

Although this sort of talk was not indulged in by the more intelligent officers, there was enough of it to indicate the existence of an inferiority complex on the part of the Navy, which has been singularly out in the cold during the series of trans-Atlantic and trans-Pacific flights, to say nothing of being warm under the collar following a resumption of attacks upon it by General Billy Mitchell.

Byrd's flight, of course, was a purely private enterprise.

CASHMAN SAYS U. W.
MUST HAVE LIBRARY

Madison — (AP) — Senator John Cashman, author of the LaFollette Memorial Library bill, which was defeated in the state senate, Friday issued a statement regarding library conditions at the University of Wisconsin. Senator Cashman is a regent of the university.

"The University of Wisconsin has its library building of its own," the senator said. "The school's library at present is housed in the State Historical Library building and is there because it has no place of its own."

"The State Historical Library houses not only its own institution but also has one floor for the state museum. The University needs a library of its own, sufficient for the needs of 9,000 students. The Historical Library, where the university library is only a tenant at will, can never supply that need."

"As an historical library it will be unable to supply the needs of an advanced class of readers and for reference in historical work but it can never supply the demands made by undergraduate students. Any addition to the historical library is a waste of money."

During the last session of the legislature the law makers appropriated $250,000 to the university for the purpose of building an addition to the historical library. The library, a separate organization, naturally could not make use of the money. Last Wednesday the senate re-appropriated the sum to the Historical library.

GOVERNOR VETOES BILL TO EXTEND WORK LIENS

Madison — (AP) — Governor Zimmerman has vetoed a bill proposing to extend the statutes regarding liens so as to permit liens against proceeds due contractors on public improvements by making licensable such items as gasoline, fuel oil, food for camps or crews and hay or feed.

The governor said that he thought this was too great an extension of the laws and imposed a burden upon the contractors and the public "far in excess of that of private construction work." He devoted several pages to his message of veto to the assembly, in which the bill originated.

No Finer Quality—No Greater Values

"VALUE" is that which renders anything useful; degree of value is the degree of usefulness.

"GOOD VALUE" represents a useful commodity at a cost that is not excessive. The "VALUE" of meat lies in its wholesomeness, savoriness and nutritional usefulness. A "GOOD MEAT VALUE" is a reasonable price per pound based on food value and wholesomeness.

LITTLE JOE

IT'S OVER YOUR HEAD, IS WHAT SOME OF THE WILD WAVES GOTTA BE SAVING.

THE NUT CRACKER

We have no desire to enter an international controversy. Mr. Levin can bring back with him all the Frenchmen he likes. . . As long as he lets Carpenter stay where he is.

"Prosperity is ruinous," says Babe Ruth in a speech to Boy Scouts. We can't think of any better way to have rule come upon you.

"Dempsey's Gaze Halts Foe's Egotism," says a headline which leads us to break out in verse:

You'll get your "I" back
Eye and eye.

Competition may be the life of trade, but it will be the death of Babe.

HEAR THESE New Victor Records

20683—Shanghai Dream Man—Fox Trot—Paul Whiteman & his Orch.
Fallen Leaf—Fox Trot—Paul Whiteman and His Orchestra
Price 75c

Every once in a while Paul Whiteman seems to rebel against the current order in fox trots and demand something superior. He has achieved it in these two fox trots, one in the "Chinese," the second in the American Indian style. "Shanghai Dream Man," in which the fine Roman hand of Ferde Grofe is evident, has the finest double-reed effects we have ever heard in popular dance music. Chinese tub-drums and the tom-tom are used, no less than eight violins, and the big tom-tom of the regular orchestra. There is a vocal chorus mock-Chinese words. But the number is a fox trot nevertheless, to be danced in regular style. With it is a number based on themes of Frederick Knight Logan's. Readers who accept the idea of ethnic kinship between the Chinese and the American Indian, may find food for thought in the resemblances between these numbers—even if the food is half dessert.

20730—One Sweet Letter from You Gene Austin
Yesterday Gene Austin
Price 75c

Popular sentiment to set crazy the flapper population. Both songs are in the safest and sanest popular manner, not precisely a whistling manner, but in a delicately insidious style not so removed from it. The first record is made to the piano while an instrumental quartet supplies the accompaniment to the second.

20729—I May Learn to Forget Some Day—Waltz
Charles Dornberger and His Orchestra
I Could Waltz On Forever—Waltz The Troubadours
Price 75c

Two new waltzes in similar musical style but widely different orchestral treatment. Both are slow in tempo, with the smooth melodies and long phrases demanded by the current dancer. But it will be interesting, to a few of us anyway, to compare differences of detail between orchestra leaders' methods, however little dancers may notice them on the floor in compositions of similar type. Both numbers have vocal refrains—Dornberger himself in the first, and Johnny Marvin in the second.

JACK LOCKWILL'S POLICE DOG

The moon, huge and red as blood, was just rising, but in places the thick woods were very dark. Through that darkness Benton fled, panic-stricken. When he paused to listen, he heard the patter of pursuing feet, and once or twice he saw two fiery eyes gleaming in the low underbrush. "If I had my pistol now, I could shoot the critter," he whispered, his soul sick with fear.

When Thor followed the fleeing ruffian from the hut, Jack staggered to the door and tried to call him back. "No use," said Molly. "He's always hated Benton."

When they left the hut, the moon, much smaller in appearance, and gleaming like a silver shield, was soaring above the trees. Molly and her father each carried a small bundle. "Hark!" said Jack as they stepped outside. Far away, a dog was howling daintily. "It's Thor!" whispered the girl. "That's how he howled when he knew Malone was dead!" "Benton's done for!" said Dugan.

KROMER VINDICATED
BY KLOZA PURCHASE*"Stormy" Trained Player
Sold to Brooklyn for Sum of $65,000

Kaukauna — If Kaukauna baseball fans and friends of "Stormy" Kromer, former manager of the local baseball club hear distant laughter it's a bet that their old friend Stormy is doing the ha-ha-ing. The cause for Stormy's cheerful frame of mind is that one of his old protégés in the Southwestern league, when he managed Blytheville, Ark., has just been sold to Brooklyn for what is supposed to be the highest price ever paid for a minor league baseball player. Kromer's laughs are directed at the sport writers who have commented none too favorably on his methods of making ball players.

Wednesday paper's announced that Brooklyn had bought a former Milwaukee youth, Jack Kloza by name, from Birmingham of the Southern association for $65,000. That in itself was a good enough story but it also develops that the youngster is one of the boys Kromer took with him to Blytheville in 1925. Kloza made good from the first with Kromer's aggregation even though Stormy was the recipient of plenty of razzing when the team lost around thirty consecutive games.

Kromer sold Kloza to one of the southern teams in a bigger league and the progress of the youngster took the eye of Brooklyn scouts. Kloza started as a catcher for Stormy but was made over into a second baseman.

Another one of Stormy's youngsters, Grabby, who incidentally played at Kaukauna a few years ago, is also holding the eye of big time scouts. Grabby is batting .560 with the Kromers in the Milwaukee Industrial League and is a fielding sensation. He plays shortstop. Clarence Pocan, who has pitched for Kimberly the past few weeks, is also reported to be still under Kromer's wing. Pocan batted .32 and uncorked 27 homers in the Southwestern league last year according to reports.

MID-WEEK GUN SHOOT AT KAUKAUNA'S CLUB

Kaukauna — A practice gun shoot will be held at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, on the grounds of the Kaukauna Gun Club according to club officials. Inability of several of the club members to practice over the weekend has prompted the midweek shoot.

MUNICIPAL SWIMMING POOL FAVORITE SPOT

Kaukauna — The municipal pool has been the rendezvous for many of the city's youngsters during the several hot days this week. Girls have the pool on Monday, Wednesday and Friday and the boys take their plunges on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

KAUKAUNA REVIEW BOARD
CONFERS WITH TAX BODY

Kaukauna — Several members of the board of review went to Madison Friday to meet members of the state tax commission. Several matters pertaining to the valuation of Kaukauna property were to be discussed.

25 CHERRY PICKERS OFF FOR DOOR-CO ORCHARDS*FREEDOM PEOPLE GO TO ONEIDA CELEBRATION

Kaukauna — Kaukauna's contingent of cherry pickers, about 25 boys, left Thursday morning for the cherry orchards at Sturgeon Bay. The cherry season this year is exceedingly late because of the early spring rains and cool weather. Only 70 percent crop is expected. The boys will be gone for about three weeks during which time mail addressed to Camp Chac, Sturgeon Bay, will reach them.

KAUKAUNA BASEBALL TEAM WORKING HARD*Players Are Anxious to Give Green Bay Nine Bad Trimming

Kaukauna — Les Smith's inspired youngsters who make up the Kaukauna baseball team have practiced several times this week preparing for their game with Green Bay a week from Sunday. However, the Kaw management and the players realize that the open date they have this week does not bode any good for their outfit and they are trying to find some good enough baseball team to play against for the Sabbath matinee. Several teams have been under consideration but Friday morning nothing definite had been arranged.

Skull practice and inside baseball together with the usual batting and fielding practices have taken up much of the extra time the boys have been putting in. Eddie Johnson has been out on all occasions and is rapidly rounding into shape. Just what position Johnson will play has not been decided. Shortstop seems to be the weakest link in the Kaw lineup just now if the former state leaguer is placed there Wall and Cavanaugh will alternate at the keystone sack. Johnson is expected to make his first official appearance against the Bays.

LOUIS STELZNER BURIED IN LUTHERAN CEMETERY

Kaukauna — The funeral of Louis Stelzner, who died at his home about a half mile north of the city on county highway J, was held at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon from the Trinity Lutheran church. Interment was in Lutheran cemetery.

Mr. Stelzner, who was 75 years of age, was born in Germany and came to this country when a few months old. Death was due to infirmities of old age. Mr. Stelzner was a bachelor and is survived by two brothers, Julius residing on route 2 Kaukauna and with whom he made his home, William of Grand Chute and one sister, Mrs. William Rohm, Appleton.

KAUKAUNA PERSONALS

MRS. ANTON FISHER, 75, DIES AT SEYMOUR HOME

Special to Post-Crescent
Seymour — Mrs. Anton Fisher, 75, died at her home in this city Wednesday afternoon. She was born in German Bohemia, Germany in October, 1851. When she was 23 years of age she came to this country, coming to the town of Seymour. In 1878 she was married to Anton Fisher in Seymour. The couple moved on a farm and lived

LOOK INTO FUTURE AND SEE NEED FOR STATE ZONE SCHEME

Mayor Rule Attends Meeting in Oshkosh for Discussion of Zoning Problem

Members of the Wisconsin Association of Real Estate Brokers and chairmen of city planning commissions urged a co-ordinated zoning plan for the entire state at a meeting Thursday in Oshkosh. A resolution endorsing it and another authorizing the appointment of a land planning committee were adopted. Mayor A. C. Rule, chairman of the local planning commission attended the zoning meeting and D. P. Steinberg was present at the real estate sessions.

Milwaukee's chances of outgrowing the boundaries of the county and the need for conserving Wisconsin's natural advantages were the arguments used by proponents of the state zone plan. The present county zoning laws might conflict at the county lines, while a coordinated state plan would eliminate difficulties before they arise. In northern Wisconsin lands could be set aside for agriculture and timber and maintained perpetually.

Milwaukee is telling its citizens that streets will be 12 feet wide, although they are not made that wide now, Mayor Rule said. Eventually they will be, but the people are notified now and the building line's established far back so there will be no buildings to move when the streets are made wider.

Directors of the association also adopted resolutions condemning "free lot" gift schemes as bad for public confidence in real estate.

An attempt was made to organize a Wisconsin City and Regional Planning association to consist of mayors of cities or other individuals or organizations interested in the objects for which the conference was organized. The object of the organization would be to exchange ideas and to promote the cause of city, town and regional planning in the state. Mayor Rule will explain the plan to the Appleton planning commission of Kenosha, to consider whether Appleton will join the association.

Temporary officers were elected for the association. A. J. Rabuck, assistant city planning engineer of Milwaukee, is president; L. S. Smith, professor of city planning at the University of Wisconsin, first vice president; C. B. Whitnah, secretary of the board of public land commissioners of Milwaukee, second vice president; William E. O'Brien, secretary of the city planning commission of Kenosha, secretary and treasurer.

DEATHS

KIRSCH FUNERAL

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 Monday afternoon at the Brettschneider funeral home for Harvey Kirsch, 20, who was fatally injured Thursday when a train hit the automobile truck in which he was riding. The accident occurred at the grade crossing of the Soo line on Highway 150 in Neenah.

Kirsch is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kirsch of Elton; and five sisters, Mrs. William E. Mador of Kimberly, Mrs. R. Rehfeld of Appleton; and Margie, Bertha and Dolores Kirsch.

Dr. E. Gerken, acting pastor of the Zion Lutheran church in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Theo Marth, will conduct the funeral. Interment will be in Riverside cemetery.

MRS. MARIE CULBERTSON

Mrs. Marie Culbertson, 71, died at 11:30 Friday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Jensen, 24 E. Franklin-st, following a long illness. She was born in Belfast, Ireland, and at the age of ten years moved to Illinois. She was married forty-seven years ago to John Culbertson. After their marriage, they settled on a farm in the town of Greenville where they lived until 28 years ago when they moved to Appleton. Mr. Culbertson died 19 years ago. The survivors are one daughter, Mrs. Arthur Jensen, a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Alvin Culbertson, two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Bailey of Fairview, Ill., Mrs. Frank Gosline of Buckley, Ill., and four brothers, William Martin and Thomas Martin of Mutual, Okla., Samuel of Gettysburg, S. D., and Joseph of Oklahoma City. The funeral will be held at 3:30 Saturday afternoon from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jensen. Dr. J. R. Denyes will conduct the services. Interment will be in Riverside.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDS PLAYGROUND SOCIAL

In spite of the rain Wednesday evening a large crowd attended the first ward social of the new city playground system at the Third ward playground. The program opened with a softball game in which the Third ward team defeated the Fifth ward, 85. This was followed by folk dancing by the girls of the playgrounds, an acrobatic stunt by Charles Schaefer, ground director and Miss Farnam Ryan and a clever solo dance by Miss Virginia Hoscood.

Friday evening a social will be held at the Sixth ward grounds, featuring a softball game between the Sixth and First ward boys. The teams now are tied for first place in the city playground league.

GIRLS SIGN UP TO SELL HEART TAGS FOR V. OF A.

Several girls already have signed their willingness to help sell tags on "Heart" tag day Saturday to be sponsored by the volunteers of America. The organization has been holding children's tag days for several years for the purpose of securing money to help families of prisoners in Wisconsin. Requests for help usually come through the warden of the state prison or through clergymen who visit the penitentiaries.

George F. Werner, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and A. F. Jensen, physical director, motored to Oneida Island, Waupaca, Friday. They spent the day visiting the local association boys' camp on the island, directed by John W. Pugh, boys' work secretary.

warning and gave the passengers no time for life belts, the life boats or the emergency rafts.

Members of the crew also blamed the suddenness of the storm for the disaster on the grounds it gave no time to direct a systematic disposal of the life preservers.

The story told by small Katherine Olson, daughter of the ill-fated ship's captain, was typical of the tragedy. She said the weather had been ideal when the boat started its trip and had given no indication that the afternoon would be different from any of the hundred others she had spent with her daddy.

But suddenly the clouds gathered and the storm broke, waves dashing high against the side of the ship. Lightning flashed and rain fell as though poured from buckets, the child said, sending all the passengers scurrying to the opposite sides of the boat to avoid the storm.

"The boat began to tip," she said, "and the scores of other children began to cry. I was afraid too. I saw one big wave dash against the boat and fall back. Then came another but this time it splashed over the deck and drenched us all."

"I don't remember the rest very well. There was a lot of terrible howling and I remember falling into the lake and felt the bottom with my feet. I came up and paddled and paddled, managing to keep up until somebody picked me up."

SURVIVOR TELLS STORY

Charles T. Abernathy, another survivor, whose two children perished, said that when the storm broke he made his wife and the two boys stay on the upper deck.

"We were drenched but I thought it would be safer up there than down with the crowd below. As the boat began to list I cut some life belts from their fastenings but in that instant I stepped over and swept us all out into the lake. I managed to grab my wife but the two boys were washed away. I fastened one of the belts around her and we kept afloat until they picked me up."

AIRPORT

United States Steel again became active in the late morning advancing its plans for an airport at the park as the location of a landing field.

Rails were strong and active around noon, new peaks being attained by the department although a few cities such as Sheboygan, Marshfield, Woodruff and Superior have small ports. Only four states in the union have fewer landing fields than the Badger state.

One business man said he thought Appleton and the Fox River valley would be included by the government in the next middle west extension of the air mail service. If this is to become a reality, he pointed out, that the city and the valley must be prepared by establishing airports.

It would be a logical thing for Appleton to make provisions at once for a landing field, a member of the park board declared. He said he would favor any move that would give the city an airport even if it meant turning over some of the land acquired by the park for park purposes.

This view coincided with that of Mayor Rule who favors Ebb park as the location of a landing field.

The mayor said a local young man had breached him with an offer to grade and prepare Ebb park for use as a landing field in turn for free use of the field. The field is the property of the park board, however, and the applicant was referred to it.

Several Appleton men interviewed on the subject of an airport declared they had not formed any opinion as to how the project should be financed. Some believed having the city pay for an airport and others thought a stock company might be more successful. All agreed, however, that there is pressing need for concerted action in the United States will be forced to take cognizance of it."

The increased interest in aviation in all the states is due to the publicity given this means of transportation by trans-oceanic fliers, one business man said. However there has been interest in an airport for Appleton for some time and he hopes that the renewed interest will be the means of placing Appleton among the pioneer cities in the state in providing municipal airports.

"It is apparent that we can longer ignore aviation as a medium of transportation, the president of another local luncheon club said.

Ahmost everyday we see airplanes overhead. The United States is lagging because it hasn't taken advantage of all the opportunities offered in this new field. While there has been some development we have failed to keep up with the rest of the world in this problem," he said.

Oshkosh is attempting to solve the problem by forming a stock company to raise $30,000 with which to purchase and equip an airport that would be among the best in the country. A general aviation committee composed of representatives of civic clubs has the problem in hand there.

Definite steps will be taken at Oshkosh within 30 days, it is said an option on suitable piece of land has been secured and a program for raising $30,000 is laid out.

PILOT NOT TO BLAME

A preliminary investigation by the state's attorney failed to disclose any evidence of criminal negligence or violation of any state law, it was revealed. Survivors placed no blame on the captain or crew.

Rotton straps on life preservers was one of the first discoveries by Coroner Oscar Wolff in a personal inspection of the favorite.

Fred Meno, Detroit, representing the federal steamboat inspection service, with local inspectors began an inspection of the favorite. Meno said the steamer had been inspected as late as July 11. He said he was convinced the boat was seaworthy and in good condition.

The coroner, in addition to finding some life belts with straps which he tore with ease, said that some of the life preservers apparently were not easily accessible.

A special meeting of the city council was called for Monday morning to express the city's official sympathy to the families of the victims.

Divers worked throughout the morning but failed to find any additional bodies.

Coroner Wolff announced he would impanel a jury of prominent citizens to open an inquiry at 1 o'clock.

Chief of Police Hughes had his men investigating every angle of the accident.

Licensed skippers were to comprise the jury at the inquest, Coroner Wolff announced, with Sheldon Clark, vice president of the Sinclair Oil company and former Commodore of the Chicago Yacht club as foreman.

Employe of Valley Iron Works fails to recover from injury

John Landowski, 57, 1309 S. Jackson-st., died Thursday afternoon from injuries received when he fell from a scaffolding onto a concrete floor at the Valley Iron Works Thursday morning.

Funeral services will be held at the Sacred Heart church Monday morning at 9 o'clock. Interment will be in St. Joseph's cemetery.

Landowski is survived by his wife and two children, John and Elizabeth; and five sisters, Mrs. John Zarenski, Mrs. Anna Landowski, Mrs. Francis Kluth, Mrs. Rose Nachec and Mrs. Francis Schutzenbach.

Herman Achterberg of Neenah, seriously injured Thursday morning when a northbound Soo Line train struck the truck Achterberg was driving on highway 150 near Neenah, Friday afternoon was reported to be out of danger and convalescing.

Achterberg's companion, Herman Kirsch of Elton, suffered injuries which caused his death a few hours after the accident.

29 STUDENTS ATTEND THEOLOGICAL SCHOOL ENDING FRIDAY NOON

Appleton Woman Now Entitled to Ordination as Elder of Church

Twenty-nine students, 12 faculty members and 21 visitors are attending the Summer School of Theology of the Wisconsin and West Wisconsin Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal church in its fifth annual session held at Lawrence college. Examinations were started Tuesday morning and will continue until Friday noon when the school will close after a two weeks session. Thirteen of the students were from the Wisconsin conference, which includes Appleton, and 16 were from the West Wisconsin conference.

Miss Elizabeth Wilson of Appleton, formerly international secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association, has completed her studies for the office of local elder and is entitled to ordination in the church. She will be ordained at the annual conference held in Appleton in September. Miss Wilson probably is the first woman to be ordained an elder in this conference.

LECTURES ON SERVICES
Dr. E. E. Prescott of Fredericksburg, Va., lectured on The New Mid-week Service last week. Lectures on the History of Christian Progress have been given this week by Dr. Edward P. Robertson, president of Wesley college in North Dakota. His closing address was made Wednesday afternoon.

Religious contributions to all civilization from 1400 A. D. to the present time were traced by Dr. Robertson. He illustrated with a chart which he has prepared showing the simultaneous chronological advancement of freedom of thought in religious and in progress of science and other events. The time of John and Charles Wesley founders of the Methodist church was in the same era as the signing of the declaration of independence and the American revolution. Darwin's theories of evolution came at the same time as the new freedom in religion.

Wesley college in North Dakota is affiliated with the University of North Dakota at Grand Forks, N. D. It was founded 20 years ago in February. Various religious denominations are affiliated in the college.

Dr. Allan MacRossie, educational director of all summer schools held under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal church throughout the United States, visited the Appleton school Friday. A picture of students and faculty was taken with the director. Forty of the schools have been established in the country.

ADMISSIONS COURSE
All candidates for admission on trial for the September conference were expected to be at the school. The course on admissions was taken by the candidates. Following the admissions course are courses for four years work which must be completed within a

Capitol Welcomes Visitors During Hot Summer Season

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington — These are the days when Washington lets down. The wheels of government turn, but ever so slowly. Those officials and workers who have been unable to flee the heat just naturally "go native."

It has been a comparatively cool summer for the capital, thanks apparently to Herbert Janvrin Browne, the long distance weather forecaster, but the hot muggy days that do come require a spell of recuperation between each other.

This is the time of year when government officials welcome visitors to their offices. In case one finds them doing a little actual work, they are invariably tickled to death to leave maximum time of eight years before a minister may be ordained an elder of the church. At the completion of five years of the work, ordination as a deacon is possible. Deacons of the church have all the privileges of a clergymen except that of administering the sacrament. Elders are full pastors with all privileges of the church. The Rev. Allen Adams, pastor of Algoma Methodist church in Oshkosh, acted as dean of the school.

Other members of the faculty were: Secretary F. R. Harding; homiletics, A. E. Tink; sociology, E. E. Clarke; philosophy, A. H. Hustedt; systematic theology, D. O. Anderson; new testament, J. W. Harris; religious education, C. J. Lotz; comparative religion, E. Harris; practical theology, D. H. Lovin; history, G. H. Willett; old testament, Harry S. Wiss.

Classes were held in the mornings and until 3 o'clock in the afternoons. Recreational periods were planned from 4 o'clock to 5:30 in the afternoons. Kitten ball was played by the students and faculty most of the days.

It does not seem to be commonly realized that a cut of a million votes or so in the size of the next Republican presidential vote might conceivably result in a Democratic administration.

DETAILED PROGRAM FOR Y CONVENTION MAILED TO LEADERS

Several Appleton Men to Attend Milwaukee Meeting Ending Sept. 1

A detailed program for the sixth annual International Y's Mens' convention, which is expected to draw Y. M. C. A. leaders from all parts of the world to Milwaukee when it convenes there from Aug. 29 to Sept. 1, was announced this week by officers of the Milwaukee association. John Trautman, president of the Appleton club, and Frank Sager, past president, and district secretary, will represent the local club. Several other Appleton men are expected to attend for shorter periods because of the closeness of the convention city.

All convention sessions will be held at the Hotel Pfister. Dr. Chester C. Schneider, Milwaukee, International president, will be chairman.

The program will open Aug. 29, at 9 o'clock in the morning, with a meeting of the board of directors. Huron H. Smith of the public museum staff and a member of the Milwaukee Y's Men's club, will preside at a luncheon following the registration of delegates. Mayor Hoan will welcome visiting delegates to Milwaukee and Dr. J. E. Modest, general secretary of the Milwaukee Y. M. C. A., will extend a welcome.

A report of the international officers will be presented at the afternoon session and committees will be appointed. Membership and attendance problems, budgets and finances will be discussed. At a smoker and Indian ceremonial at 6:30 Glenn Beers, Waterloo, Iowa, past president of the National clubs, will preside. Chippewa Indians will give an Indian ceremonial and dance. Dr. Schneider will speak.

On Tuesday, the second convention

N. Y., will preside at a noon luncheon. Henry Moehlenpah of Milwaukee will speak. Herbert Blue, an editor of "Association Men," national Y. M. C. A. publication, will speak at the afternoon session. Henry Grimes, international secretary; Edgar J. McCoy and others also will give addresses.

Dr. Schneider will preside at a dinner at 7. John Mees, past president of Keweenaw International, will speak. A ball is scheduled for $2.00.

Thursday, the closing day of the convention, will be devoted to committee reports, election of officers and other business.
